Swim Suit Psychology Explained

By GAY PAULEY

New York — A woman should buy a bathing suit with psychology as well as swimming in mind, says designer Rose Marie Reid.

"When I talk about psychology, everybody thinks I mean a suit to catch a man," said Miss Reid.

"Well, that is a by-product. But I mean a woman should choose a suit which gives her confidence on the beach. It should have evening dress appeal."

Part of that confidence apparently comes from cover-up. For Miss Reid is just one of several manufacturers this season stressing more, rather than less, on the American woman doesn't want the bold suit anyway, said the designer in an interview. For two reasons. She is inherently a modest soul. And the man likes her that way.

"This is why the Bikini never had a chance here," said Miss Reid, a suit designer for 20 years. "This country never has worshipped nudity. . . I don't think it ever will."

"Oh, I know, some men say, why don't we make suits more daring. But they hastily add they don't want their wives wearing them."

"Our showroom models even want the modest suits. And they are girls whose figures are so flawless they'd look good in a coat of paint."

Modesty prevails, even though Miss Reid said figures are steadily improving.

Designer Reid, a divorcee and mother of three children, the eldest 20, started her career in her home town of Vancouver, British Columbia. She first designed bathing suits for herself, then for a few friends until she built a small following.

Ten years ago she moved to Los Angeles and formed the company which bears her name. She introduced the suit engineered from the inside to fit and control like a foundation garment. She helped the whole industry promote the higher-priced, glamorized suit, and also helped it sell women on the idea they needed a bathing suit wardrobe.

One of Miss Reid's first "glamour" suits was dubbed the "Miss Fort Knox"—a gold lame mail-look, which retailed for $90. She since has used such luxury materials as brocade, damask, tapestry and scrolled embroideries.

One of this year's highlights is called "Northern Lights," a white suit of elasticized bengaline sprinkled with 4,000 hand-sewn, iridescent sequins.

Girl Scouts

Troop Busy

During the month of May, Girl Scouts in Troop 164, Roosevelt district, have found many activities to keep them busy. Before the court of awards they completed work on skating, cyclist, my troop, personal health, swimmer, cook, child care, homemaker, athlete, dancer, horsewoman and pen-pal badges.

A Juliet Low friendship fund tea was held for the mothers May 15 at the George Gannon home. Guests of honor for the occasion were Karen Johnson, senior scout from Troop 2, Mrs. Theo Anseth and Mrs. Lester Gilman. Karen spoke on the various activities of fun and service they could look forward to in senior scouting. Mrs. Anseth and Mrs. Gilman were members of the first troop of Medford Girl Scouts, and related many interesting events of their troop meetings and first summer camp sessions. The girls were especially interested in the uniforms and pins they wore at that time.

Refreshments were made and served by the girls. May 17 the girls were hostesses.

The show will be held in VFW hall in Rogue River from 1 to 9 p.m. The theme will be "Flowers in Swing Time" and an invitation is extended to the public and to all garden clubs to attend. Entries will be welcomed.

The club has chosen a Girl Scout whose expenses will be paid for a 10-day period at Camp Low Echo.

Members and guests brought many roses and other flowers to the meeting for exhibit. It was said that cut roses will last longer if two teaspoons of salt are added to each quart of water, or one tablespoon of alum to each quart of water.

The next meeting of the club will be held June 18 at the home of Mrs. Paul Hughes. Officers will be installed. All gardeners are welcome.

Guests were Mrs. Lois Jarvis, Bellingham, Wash., a guest of the club president, Mrs. Carl Christensen; Mrs. Bassett, Pasadena, Calif., a guest of Mrs. Larry Bassett; Mrs. Roy Bertelson, and Mrs. John Christensen of Fergus Falls, Minn., a sister and aunt of Mrs. F. Savory Stew Note

Wine adds an extra-delicious note to savory stews and braised meats. Simply replace 1 to 1½ cups of the water called for with wine. A Burgundy or other red table wine is right for beef; a white table wine such as Sauterne or Rhine wine is the choice for lamb.

Rosy-red and fragrant as hibiscus in the moonlight, Hawaiian Punch will please you and you'll come back for more.

Department Says People Well Fed On Wrong Foods

Washington — The U. S. Department of Agriculture says that much of the nation is well-fed on the wrong foods.

A survey of the Western and North Central states shows that high-calorie foods are the most popular. But these foods tend to make some persons fat, and keep others from getting enough protective foods.

Women from 30 to 90 years of age in Iowa prefer bread, potatoes, fats and desserts—along with meat—as the main foods in their diet. For women in South Dakota, sweets and desserts, cereal products and table fats supply more than 60 per cent of the day's calories.

Main differences in diet patterns are in amount of food eaten, rather than in types. Most diets do not have enough calcium, USDA said. In fact, fewer than one-fifth of the Iowa and South Dakota women get the eight-tenths of a gram of calcium necessary for good health.
