The Family Council

Editor's note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual report. The Family Council does not give advice; it merely reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Eunice M.—I can't keep my temper. Ronald M.—If this is love, I can do without it.

Eunice M.—Maybe all my troubles stem from the fact that I am redheaded, but I can't help that, can I? Like most red-heads, I have a terrible temper. When I am angry, I throw things and say things I don't mean. My family understands me and makes allowances, but my husband doesn't.

We have been married nearly a year and it's been pretty hectic. Half the time Ronnie doesn't even speak to me. By the time he's gotten over one quarrel, I'm heading for a new storm.

I love Ronnie very much. He can't seem to understand that. He says if I loved him I couldn't act that way. But I think that if he loved me he would make allowances for me. I'm just not the peaceful type and never will be. Just the same, I don't hold grudges the way he does.

Ronald M.—Eunice taunts me with being a Milquetoast when I don't fight her back, but I wasn't brought up to battle with women. We used to quarrel some times when we were engaged, but she didn't throw things then—or scream at the top of her lungs so that all the neighbors could hear.

Not long ago Eunice got into a real brawl with another girl. She said the other girl was making a play for me and that I ought to feel flattered because she is ready to fight for me like that. She said one of her old boy friends told her that she is primitive and I don't appreciate her. Just the same, it embarrasses me when she acts up.

If this is love, I can do without it. I never thought marriage would be a matter of dodging dishes.

The Council: Eunice and Ronald must have had a very short engagement. It is hard to see how a "primitive" character like that girl could have managed to keep the awful secret of her true disposition for very long.

Nevertheless, Eunice did manage to keep her temper for a certain length of time and that is ample evidence it can be done. Eunice's statement indicates that she believes in acting as she does. Her family has evidently also given her the green light to indulge in her redheaded temper. This family just belongs to that school of thought which holds it is better to blow off steam at any cost than to suffer inside.

Unfortunately Ronald does not belong to this same school of thought. Most men would feel as Ronald does—despite the word of appreciation from Eunice's old boy friend.

If she wishes to preserve her marriage, Eunice will have to make some drastic alterations in her personality. She might try dyeing that red hair for a while to see if she can become a placid blonde or brunette.

If that doesn't work she can try other means of blowing off steam—like taking long walks or doing heavy housework. Most important, she should stop being so pleased with her present personality. It's not that attractive.

Telephone Reports Atomic Blast News

Atomic Test Site, Nev.—The atomic blast today was the first time in the history of U.S. atomic bomb testing that a direct telephone line was used to report the news direct from the Nevada test site into Los Angeles.

United Press Correspondent Robert Bennyhoff at the site stood in a lighted telephone booth in the pre-dawn darkness on News Nob, 11 miles from the detonation, the line open to Los Angeles.

"It was like going into the telephone booth at the corner gas station to report a collision at the intersection," said veteran reporter Bennyhoff.

On the other end of the line, United Press Los Angeles Bureau Manager William Best distinctly heard the concussion of the explosion.

"It sounded like the telephone booth door slammed," he said.
