

America's European Allies Breaking Through China Trade Barrier Despite U.S. Protests

London — (UP) — America's Allies in Europe are breaking through the China trade barrier, led by Britain, France, Norway and Denmark are not far behind.

British Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd announced Thursday in the House of Commons that Britain was relaxing restrictions despite opposition from the United States.

The other European nations—and Japan—were hacking away at the barrier without any assurances there is much trading to be done.

They are retaining the ban of shipment of any "strategic" goods to the Communist Chinese — items which could help the Chinese war machine. But they have pressed for elimination of more than 400 items from the embargo which was clamped down, chiefly due to pressure from the United States, at the height of the Korean war in 1951.

U.S. Stands Firm
At a meeting in Paris this week, representing of 15 Western nations working for an agreement to bring the embargo list for China into line with that for Russia. It has been possible to ship goods to the Soviet bloc in Europe which could not be sent to China. But some of the banned items went on to China via Eastern Europe.

The United States has not announced any plans to relax its own strict embargo, but the nations of Western Europe have presented the United States with an accomplished fact — they intend to try to step up trade with Peiping regardless of the American position.

Britain is locked in a fierce struggle with Japan and Western Germany for world markets. The British economic position is more precarious since Suez, and the British argue that it is in the interest of the Western Alliance to have a financially strong Britain. Socialists have battered the Conservative government over the "ridiculous" situation which allows shipment of farm tractors to Russia but not to China.

Disturbed By Inroads
Britain today is doing about as much trade with China as she did before the Communists took over, but British businessmen are disturbed by the inroads others are making in the market offered by the "new" China. Here are comparative figures for trade with China in millions of dollars in 1956:

|              | Exports | Imports |
|--------------|---------|---------|
| Japan        | 72      | 90      |
| West Germany | 37      | 53      |
| Britain      | 30      | 35      |

Non-Communist nations of the Middle East, Asia and Europe did $900 million worth of trade with Red China last year, a survey shows. It created a favorable trade balance of $150 million for China. Some machinery shipped to China was outside the Korean war embargo list, this survey showed.

Trade authorities in London say there is evidence of "political" motives in China's trade. They say China is shipping some goods which are in short supply at home and buying supplies for which she has no real need. In addition, as one authority put it, "There is not much of a world market for bird's nest soup."

Woman Lives 20 Days Beside Mate's Body In Plane Wreckage

Rawlins, Wyo. — The 45-year-old survivor of a light plane crash, who lived beside her dead husband on a lonely mountain top for 20 days on only three candy bars and melted snow, was reported in good condition today in a Rawlins hospital.

Mrs. Dorothy Le Masurier said her husband, Dalton, a Duluth, Minn., radio and television station executive, died four days after their private plane crashed on a snow-capped Ferris mountain peak 60 miles north of here.

Searchers Came Near
Although search planes flew within sight of the wreckage several times and a group of sheep herders once camped only two or three miles away, Mrs. Le Masurier was not spotted until Thursday. She was sighted by Jack Putnam, foreman of the Buzzard ranch, who was looking for stray cows with a pair of binoculars.

A rescue party set out at dawn today to remove Le Masurier's body from the crash scene.

Doctors reported the woman was suffering from exposure but said her condition, "amazingly good," was not considered critical.

Missing Since May 11
The couple had been missing since May 11 when they took off from Salt Lake City for Rapid City, S.D.

When rescuers reached Mrs. Le Masurier she struggled to remain with her husband's body, she said. She told them she tried frantically to attract the attention of rescue planes but could not. The couple had only two matches and they were wet.

When the planes flew nearby "I waved a red shirt trying to get them to see us," she sobbed.

When found she was barefoot and was wearing her dead husband's trousers. She said all she had to eat during the agonizing 20 days were three candy bars she bought by chance at Salt Lake City. She drank melted snow.

Stayed in Wreckage
Mrs. Le Masurier said she and her husband stayed in the plane's wreckage for the first three days after the crash and then decided to try to get off the mountain. Her husband got only 400 yards before he died.

Mrs. Le Masurier was "very coherent" when she was found and was in "surprisingly good shape considering what she had been through," according to Robert D. Paul, Carbon county coroner.

The woman told rescuers that at one time a group of sheep herders came within two or three miles of the wreckage but that she chose to stay with her husband's body rather than try to get to them.

Electronics Worker Cooked To Death by Radar Beam Exposure

Los Angeles — An electronics technician has literally been cooked to death by a one-minute exposure to a radar beam, it was disclosed today in a medical journal.

At least two other persons are under treatment here for similar injuries and another case was reported at Sandia Air Force Base, N.M., an article in "California Medicine" said.

The dead man was exposed at 10 feet from the source of the radar beam, the journal said. After one minute he felt a "sensation of heat" in his abdomen and moved out of the ray. He died in a few days. Autopsy showed that his internal organs were cooked by the microwave rays in the same manner that electronic rotisseries and roasters cook food in thousands of American homes today.

Many Sources of Danger

Dr. John T. McLaughlin, Glendale, Calif., surgeon and consultant in industrial medicine, who reported the death for the journal, said he is treating two other cases here. Both men have scars of the spleen traceable to exposure to radar waves, he said.

The danger exists for military personnel dealing directly with radar equipment, workers in radar manufacturing and testing, and operators of commercial radar on ships and planes who work "up close" to radar, he said.

A source familiar with medical literature on the subject said the rays are the same as those beamed into every television set, although there is no record of injury from TV microwaves. He said it was not known whether exposure at a distance to either radar or TV microwave beams is dangerous. Countless persons, including airplane and ship passengers, are exposed daily to radar rays. Whether there is danger from low-powered radar equipment, such as that used by police traffic patrols, also is now known, he said.

"Many studies on animals already have been made showing the ability of radar waves to burn internal organs and brains that do not have the ability to react like the skin and cannot adjust to temperatures that are too high," the source said.

A recent study by Dr. Charles Barron, medical director at Lockheed Aircraft company, Burbank, Calif., showed 25 percent of personnel who have close contact with radar equipment have a "significant decrease" in number of white cells in their blood.

Studies on animals have shown bone marrow damage and eye cataracts as well as fatal injuries to the brain, heart and other organs as a result of radar or microwave exposure.

Ike's Foreign Aid Plans May Suffer By British Action

Washington — Sen. Charles E. Potter (R-Mich.) said today that congressional passage of President Eisenhower's foreign aid program may "possibly" be hampered by Britain's decision to increase its trade with Red China.

Potter, a member of the Interstate and Foreign Commerce committee, called the British action "regrettable." But it comes as no surprise, he said, "because pressures have been building up for an increase in such trade."

Senate Republican Leader William F. Knowland (Calif.) has vigorously opposed increased trade with Red China on the ground that it would increase her war-making capabilities.

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (D. Minn.), a member of the Foreign Relations committee, said, however, that "if the disarmament issue with the Communists is being taken seriously, why not the trade issue?"

Humphrey said Britain "has been pushed very hard financially" and that the move had been expected all along.

However, Sen. George M. Smathers (D-Fla.), also a member of the Foreign Relations committee, is reported to be ready to urge that the United States itself begin trading with Communist China.

Malheur River Bridge Rebuilding Planned

Ontario — The Ontario Chamber of Commerce was informed today that the State Highway Department had started work on plans to rebuild the old Malheur river bridge on U.S. Highway 30 N.
