Annual Show, Convention Sponsored by Rose Society

Attention of all rose fanciers in the valley is focused this week on the third annual show of Medford Rose society, and the ninth annual convention of the Northwest district, American Rose society.

The rose show will be held Friday, June 7, in the cafeteria of Medford High school. Entries will be received from 6:30 to 9:30 a.m., and the show will be open to visitors from 1 to 9 p.m. without charge. The convention opens the same morning with registration at the Medford hotel, and sessions to be held in the court house auditorium. About 150 visitors from four Pacific northwest states and British Columbia are expected.

The rose show committee has issued a show schedule, and copies are available at Lawrence's and Swen's stores. The schedule states that the rules and regulations of American Rose society will govern the show, and it is open to all amateur rose growers. There is no entry fee, all specimen roses must have been grown outdoors by the exhibitor.

Each entry in the specimen class should be correctly named. Change Made

One change in the instructions as printed has been announced. Instead of an exhibitor being allowed to show one specimen in any one class, they may now show one of any variety; in other words they may enter as many as they wish in a class, but each rose must be a different variety.

An innovation this year is the showing of decorative roses as well as exhibition roses. The decorative roses are described as varieties which do not normally develop exhibition form and would thereby not be judged by the same scale used for exhibition roses. Decorative roses are judged from the standpoint of beauty evidence of good gardening culture and true color.

Exhibition roses are classified as those which have, at the most perfect phase of beauty, a circular outline with petals abundant enough to fill that outline and rising to a well formed center. It should have substance enough to carry it through the exhibition.

The society has made up the following list of roses which are classified as decorative: Ami Quillard, Audie Murphy, Beaute, Petty Uprichard, Capistrano, Christopher Stone, Condesa de Sastago, Ellipse, Pandango, Forty Niner, Fred Edmunds, Golden Masterpiece, Golden Scepter, Grand Duchess Charlotte, Hector Dean, Living Rose, Lodestar, Mme. Henri Guillot, Margaret McGredy, McGredy's Sunset.

Iris Show Held In Cave Junction

Cave Junction — Mrs. Harry O. Smith, winner in the specimen stalk division of the Illinois Valley Garden club iris show Wednesday, was sweepstakes winner for the show. Mrs. James Payne won the best in show award for her arrangement of Country Queens.

Featured at the show was a display of wild flowers collected and arranged by Mr. and Mrs. Clay Ramsey. The exhibit filled one end of the social hall at the Immanuel Methodist church where the show was held.

Nestled in the moss and among the rocks were hundreds of wild flower varieties native to this area. Some rare plants were included in the display. Flowers were shown in their natural settings with those common to the higher elevations arranged near the mountain tops with the lowland blooms around the lake below.

In the center was a Lewisia Finckii, named by its discoverer, the late Mrs. Jack Finch, who was a member of the local garden club during the time she collected plants for firms in the United States and Europe.

To one side of the spiky red snow plants was an extremely rare albino native form of coral-ryza. Background for the exhibit was composed of native shrubs, including dogwood, azalea, mountain maple, wild lilac, knob cone pine, manzanita, and others.

One different division at the show was the "rummage" division where flowers were displayed in such items as old boots, battered teakettles and broken teacups. Driftwood settings were used in other displays.

Mrs. John W. Smith was show general chairman.

Oak Grove Group Inducts Officers
