Washington, D. C. Man Addresses Institute Today

Ashland — Epidemiology of accident control was discussed by Eugene Lehr, Washington, D. C., at this morning's session of the institute on the principles of epidemiology.

Lehr is chief of program services, accident prevention program, department of health, education and welfare.

Others to Speak

Also scheduled to speak today are Dr. Edward T. Bloomquist, chief of the U.S. public health service tuberculosis program, Washington, D.C., and Dr. George Adams, chief of the U.S. communicable disease center civil defense training program, Atlanta, Ga.

The four-day conference ends today, after study by over 70 persons working with health problems in Oregon and California.

Leading Death Cause

Lehr pointed out that accidents are the leading cause of death for age groups one through 34. He explained that while communicable disease epidemics can be explained by a relatively uncomplicated act of daily life, such as eating or drinking, the auto accident "epidemic" involves "almost innumerable environment" and human factors.

He advocated using "time tested public health techniques in the field of accident control."

The local institute at Southern Oregon college is one of four being held in Oregon during June.

Tulelake Man New County Supervisor

Yreka — Earl F. Ager, Tulelake, has been appointed by Gov. Goodwin Knight to serve as supervisor representing district one in Siskiyou county.

He will serve on the county board of supervisors, replacing the late Howard Dayton.

His appointment following consultation with the Siskiyou Republican central committee, local legislators and a straw vote in district one.
