The Family Council

Editor's note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a woman's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual report. The Family Council does not give advice; it merely reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Erik J.—I want to help the children.

Hilda J.—They must untangle themselves.

Erik J.—My wife and I are in our 60s and have five married children. Our house is paid off, I am still working and we have some savings in the bank.

Two of our children are not very well off and have gotten into debt. Since we have room in our house, I have asked them to come to stay with us, rent free. I also want to help them pay off their debts so that they can get on their feet again. My wife is against it. She says we have to have the money for our old age.

The way I see it, my wife and I will not have to worry about our old age as long as the children are able to help us. Besides, it is our duty to help our children when they are in trouble. I think my wife is being selfish.

Hilda J.—When children are young and unable to scratch for themselves, it is up to their parents to do it. When they are able to get out on their own, the parents shouldn't do anything for them.

That's the way I see it, and if that's selfish, all right I'm selfish. But I feel that there was no reason for our children to get into such a mess. Once they have done it, they must learn how to untangle themselves.

In spite of all my husband wants to do for them, the children don't really appreciate it. He used to drink a lot when he was younger and he neglected them. Now he is trying to buy back their love.

I don't want to depend on the children in our old age. What if they can't help us then?

The Council: Shakespeare wrote about an old king who gave away all his land and property to his children and then they were cast off by them. King Lear's action may have been rooted in the same fear Erik is now experiencing.

Feeling age and helplessness creeping up on him, King Lear wanted to remind his children

Chamber Plans Tour Of Valley Creamery

The Jackson County Chamber of Commerce board of directors plans to tour the Rogue River Valley Creamery in Central Point at its next meeting, June 27.

The board met yesterday and instructed Ron Gandee, head of the chamber's commercial division, to arrange transportation. The group will leave Medford at 12 noon, make a guided tour of the creamery, and hold a box lunch meeting afterward.

The board also voted to send chamber manager Don McNeill to the Rocky Mountain Institute for chamber of commerce managers July 7 through 13. McNeill will travel to Montana State University, Missoula, Mont. for the week's program.

A tentative date for the chamber's annual membership drive was set for Aug. 1. Details of the drive and a final date will be worked out in coming weeks.

The American wapiti or elk has the ears of a mule, the gait of a camel, and a body that resembles a cow.

that they owe their lives and well-being to him. After this last powerful, fatherly gesture, he wanted to throw himself at their mercy so that they would prove their love for him.

Well, the story of King Lear is melodrama, and Erik may fare much better than the old king did at the hands of his children, but that doesn't make his actions any more sensible.

If Erik really wants to make up for past neglect, as Hilda indicates, he will give his children understanding and advice, but no material aid, unless some emergency beyond their control, such as illness, occurs.
