Stray Bovine Wanders Onto Airport Runway; Captured by Medford Police

A policeman's job is a many-splendored one. And among other things, it involves tracing down stray animals . . . or their owners.

Two patrolmen from Medford city police spent a hectic couple hours yesterday with a stray "bovine" that had wandered onto an airport runway. This is the report entered by one of them.

"At approximately 7:15 a.m. 6/17/57 writer received a call from radio station KOB-312 in regards to a cow on the runway at the Medford Municipal Airport, Biddle rd., Medford, Oregon.

"Writer assisted by Officer Blank located the cow on the far north end of the runway. The cow was very nervous and decided to run, and was chased by writer and Blank for approximately 1/4 mile, where it was cornered, and ropes were then hooked onto the halter, which was on her head.

"Writer then notified the station that the cow was in custody, and that we were going to try and locate the owner of the bovine.

"Officer Blank then walked the cow to the West end of the runway, while the writer in car No. 1 contacted approximately six (6) farms in the area, but was unable to locate anyone that owned, or knew who owned the cow.

"Writer and Officer Blank then walked the cow to a farm, which was approximately 1 mile West of the airport, which seemed to have a herd of the same type of cows. We were unable to contact anyone at this farm in regards to the cow.

"Officer Blank then went south on Table Rock Road, while writer stayed with the cow. Officer Blank contacted two farms during this time, but was unable to find the owner.

"Proceeded to Airport:
"Writer then proceeded back to the airport, and picked up the police vehicle, and then went back and picked up Officer Blank. The cow was securely tied to a fence post at this time, while writer and Officer Blank tried to locate owner.

"After contacting 3 more farms in the area, we received a tip that the people that lived at route 2, box 251, Medford, Oregon, owned such a cow, and that it could possibly be theirs.

"Writer and Officer Blank contacted Carl C. Crawford, route 2, box 251, Medford, Oregon, who stated that it was probably his cow, and that he would go with us and look at the cow to make sure.

"At approximately 9:35 a.m., Crawford identified his cow, and was warned of its straying onto the airport runway."

Mercy Flight Takes Blood To Tacoma

Portland — The Portland-Tacoma blood run was active again today with the second 10-minute jet plane mercy flight between the two cities in less than a week.

Late last week a special type of blood was flown on short notice from the Portland blood bank to Madigan hospital at Ft. Lewis, Wash., to save the life of an ulcer victim.

Today the 460th Fighter Interceptor Squadron here received another urgent appeal to fly 12 pints of blood to McChord field near Tacoma for an unidentified beneficiary. The blood was carried on the lap of Radar Observer 1st Lt. L. L. McCollough in the cramped space of the F89 Scorpion jet piloted by 1st Lt. Don Lang.

Bighorn Sheep Again Roam Eastern Oregon

Portland — The State Game Commission reported here today that for the first time this century Bighorn mountain sheep are roaming the scrub oak country of eastern Oregon.

After nursing a tiny herd of British Columbia sheep for two-and-a-half years at the Hart Mountain enclosure, game commission experts turned loose 18 sheep to increase their numbers without supervision. The Commission warned, however, that it will be many years before hunters will be allowed to stalk the rare species that had virtually disappeared from the Oregon range.

Counting individuals who escaped from the enclosure, the Commission believes that about 49 Bighorns are now ranging over the high cliffs of Hart Mountain.
