

Queen To Have New Wardrobe For Coming Visit in America

By MARGARET SAVILLE
U.S. Palace Correspondent
London — Queen Elizabeth II is having an entire new wardrobe designed for her American and Canadian visits next fall, for it is court etiquette that she must not appear in a foreign country in anything she has worn in public before.

So, while she has more clothes than ever before in her life as a result of visits already this year to Portugal, Denmark and France, she will be calling in her dressmakers, Norman Hartnell and Hardy Amies, and her shoemaker, Edward Rayne, as well as milliners and lingerie makers.

Having decided the functions she will attend, the Queen explains her needs and sketches are prepared, several for each suggested outfit, and sent to Buckingham Palace with small swatches of suitable material.

The Queen herself selects the sketch and the material she prefers. Occasionally she will ask Prince Philip's advice, but not so often now as she did when they were first married.

Elizabeth's wide-skirted formal evening gowns are always most elaborately hand-embroidered with sequins, semi-precious stones and seed pearls in patterns Hartnell creates. The work takes several highly skilled girls as much as a month to complete and then the design is burned so there is no possibility of another dress being decorated in the same way.

The Queen's outfitters know the special rules of royal dressing which must be observed.

The skirts long and full enough to permit gracefully getting in and out of cars and carriages. The hems invisibly weighted so no sudden gust of wind causes embarrassment. The sleeves to be cut remembering the white gloves the Queen usually wears. The hats set well off the face so everyone can see the Queen's features clearly.

Handbags have straps so they can be quickly slipped up the arm when the Queen wants to use her hands. Colors are light so the Queen can be easily distinguished in a crowd.

Fur Everywhere Is New Idea of Fashion Industry

By GAY PAULEY
United Press Correspondent

New York — The fashion industry hopes to trap every woman into fur come fall.

Furs, both long and short hair, are featured in everything from at-home to grand occasion costumes.

"There is a touch of fur everywhere," said Betina Ballard, chairman of the New York Fashion Group's ready-to-wear committee at the group's roundup of fall style trends.

Fur is used for collar and cuff, for hemline border, for hat, for coat, for coat lining, for suit, for over-blouse, even for a sweater. About the only part of the wardrobe yet unfurred is footwear. But give the industry time.

Other Lush Materials
Designers have dreamed up combinations of fur with wool knits, flannel, broadcloth, chiffon, crepe, satin, and other lush materials. They're revived broad-tail, leopard, red, black and gray fox, and raccoon, showing them in as wide usage as sable, chinchilla, mink and ermine.

Designer Gretta Plattly featured a lounge costume consisting of river otter pocket topped plaid trousers, which pick up the same soft brown shade of the fur.

Furrier Leo Ritter combined a chinchilla "cardigan" with a pair of slim-cut grey flannel slacks, in what is perhaps the costliest at-home costume around this season—$3,500.

Collar Of Sable
Several designers trim suits or coat-dress costumes with fur. Larry Aldrich put a shawl collar of sable on a slim-cut black wool suit.

Marusia-Travis Banton used cross-fox, a golden shade of fur, as trim for a hopsacking wool suit in the golden shade. The same design team combined black fox with black chiffon broadcloth in a slinky evening dress-coat combination.

A cheetah over-blouse topped a brilliant red wool skirt by designer Anne Klein. Another designer, Anna Miller, cut the halter-type bodice of an evening dress from leopard. The rest of the full-length formal is of beige chiffon.

Temperance Union Meets at Army Hall
Mrs. Jessie Minear spoke on the Twenty-Third psalm during the devotional period which opened the last meeting of Women's Christian Temperance union at the Salvation Army hall.

Mrs. G. O. Sanden presided and Mrs. Robert Taylor presented Mrs. Minear.

Mrs. Eva Dow, chairman of the flower mission department, presented Mrs. Sanden who read an article on the history of lilies. Mrs. Low conducted a ceremony for Mrs. M. Russell, who will and a memorial prayer was said for Mrs. Helen Jacoby, who recently died.

Mrs. Holly Michael and Mrs. Ernest Santo sang a duet, accompanied by Mrs. Taylor.

Mesdames Swan, Sawyer and Sparks served refreshments from a table decorated with flowers.

Photographer Here For Festival Work
Jack Moran Jr. has arrived from San Francisco to spend the next several weeks in Medford and Ashland. Mr. Moran, a photographer, will do the photographic work of the 1957 season for the Oregon Shakespearean festival at Ashland.

Mr. Moran will be with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Moran, at their home on the Jacksonville-Central Point road. The Morans went to San Francisco recently, and their son returned with them.

Honored
Prospect—Miss Mary Sue Colley was honored with a surprise bridal shower last Thursday, at the home of Mrs. Bruce Mattiesen. Miss Colley and her fiancé, Charles Darwin Bean, will be married on Thursday, June 20, at 7 o'clock at the West Main Church of Christ, Medford.

AN HERB CENTER
Boone, N.C. — This town nestled at the foot of Rich Mountain is a leading collection center for drug firms and evergreen companies which buy roots, herbs, bark and various mountain plants and leaves. The herbs and leaves are used in medicinal preparations and in decorative designs.

Judges Selected For Annual Show In Grants Pass

Grants Pass—Rachael Griffin of the Portland Art Museum staff and Andrew Vincent, professor of art and head of drawing and painting at the University of Oregon, have been selected as judges for the tenth annual Southern Oregon Art Exhibit, scheduled for June 28, 29 and 30 in the Grants Pass High school library.

Mrs. Griffin, a sculptor, teacher and writer in the field of art and art education, is well known locally, having served as a judge for the art exhibit several times in the past in addition to instructing a summer watercolor class for children for the Grants Pass Art league. She now holds the post of director of information for the Portland Art museum.

Professor Vincent, who has been on the staff of the University of Oregon Art school since 1929, studied at the Art Institute of Chicago, where he was later an instructor. His paintings have been exhibited in Chicago, Denver, Seattle, Portland and San Francisco, and both the Portland and Seattle Art Museums have purchased his paintings for their permanent collections. He has also painted murals for the Salem, Oregon, and Toppenish, Wash., post offices under government commission.

The art exhibit, which is sponsored by the Grants Pass branch of the American Association of University Women, is open to all artists in Southern Oregon, who may submit up to five pictures in any medium completed in the past five years. The entry fee is $1 for adults and 25 cents for artists under 19 years of age.

Entries will be received at the high school library from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. June 23 and 24. Judging will take place June 27, and the show will be open to the public free of charge from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. June 28 and 29, and until 4 p.m. June 30.

Antarctica Topic Of College Club

A. C. Pierce talked on "Antarctica" at the last meeting of College Women's Club of the Rogue River valley. The meeting was held at Aloha orchards, home of Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Canfield and was the final session of the club year.

Mr. Pierce recently returned from spending several weeks on "Operation Deepfreeze" as a representative of the Tucker Sno-Cat corporation of Medford. Using a large map, Mr. Pierce pointed out the areas he visited.

The temperatures varied from 10 to 25 degrees below zero, he said, and there was continuous daylight.

He pointed out the bases of Britain, Russia, France, Chile and other nations and explained that because this has been declared International Geophysical year, scientists of many nations were there carrying on research in many fields such as weather, earthquakes, air currents, influence of glaciers, cosmic rays and others.

A question period followed. For the tea which followed Mrs. Dorothy Sutton headed the committee. She was assisted by Mrs. Glen Linn, Mrs. Ray K. Bailey, Mrs. C. L. Coyle and Mrs. Roy F. Martin.
