America's Hall of Fame only looks like man's last stronghold—women are there, too.

Eight Women Who Led the Way

Shrine is in New York City.

IN THE HALL of Fame for Great Americans, it's still pretty much a man's world. Of the 86 bronze busts in the New York University shrine, only eight women soften the stern line of bearded statesmen, balding inventors, and rugged soldiers. But these women helped open the doors not only to the Hall of Fame, but to many other phases of American life. They are the suffragettes, educators, writers, and scientists who proved a woman's place is where she makes it. In years to come, other women will take their place on the famed colonnade overlooking the Harlem and Hudson River valleys—thanks to the lonely eight who blazed the trail.

Emma Willard was pioneer in education of young women.

Mary Lyon devoted a life to famous Mt. Holyoke College.

Charlotte Saunders Cushman was a leading tragedienne.

Maria Mitchell was a ranking astronomer of her day.

Harriet Beecher Stowe wrote moving "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Frances Elizabeth Willard headed temperance drive.

Alice Freeman Palmer was an active educator, reformer.

Susan B. Anthony fought for the right of women to vote.
