

CENTRAL POINT Junior Police To Form

By DORIS NUGES
Central Point — The organization of a Junior Police league in Central Point is underway, according to chief of police Wallace Bowen.

All boys and girls from eight to 14 years of age living in the Central Point area are eligible to join, Bowen said, and meetings have been scheduled for 3 p.m. Thursday in the city fire hall at Third and Pine street.

The aim of the league is to promote community safety, teaching youngsters safety on the street, bicycle safety and school yard behavior.

There will be one group of officers for the boys and another group for girls. Each will have a chief, an assistant chief, a sergeant, and patrol men. Bowen will be the instructor for the two groups.

An accident Saturday at 6:15 p.m. involving cars driven by Paul Ellis Sr. of Central Point and Jack Jackson Bailey of Jacksonville occurred at Third and Alder streets in Central Point, according to police chief Wallace Bowen. Both cars were considerably damaged. No citations were issued, Bowen said.

At 1:30 a.m. Thursday a report of a prowler at Fourth and Laurel streets was turned in to Central Point police. Another prowler was reported on Saturday night at 12:30 a.m. on Manzanita street near Fifth.

Big Parade Opens Lions' Convention

San Francisco — Thousands of members of Lions International from the United States and abroad opened their 40th annual convention today with a mammoth parade up Market st. at 9:30 a.m.

In the line of march were 40 decorated floats, 50 bands and delegations from 48 states, the territories and many foreign countries. Some 40,000 Lions and their families are attending the four-day meeting.

Officials of the organization said this was the biggest convention in the history of the service organization. The Lions claim 600,000 members.

Before the parade began, a number of state delegations held breakfasts.

Secretary of State John Foster Dulles will deliver the main address Friday morning.

Quotes From the News

By UNITED PRESS

Washington—James M. Pickens of Somerset, Md., on becoming a father at 84:
"I'm not a celebrity and I don't want to be one."

Milwaukee, Wis.—Vice President Richard M. Nixon, warning that big cuts in the defense budget would endanger U. S. security:

"I say that anyone who would make substantial cuts in the defense budget below the amounts recommended is taking a risk with America's security which the American people will not and should not support."

Miami—Author Phillip Wylie, commenting that a Supreme Court decision cannot stop obscenity in the United States:

"The American people are more preoccupied with sex and more frightened by it than any others. We're just an obscene people."

New York—Actress Frances Farmer, whose drinking and temperament landed her in a mental institution 14 years ago, on her decision to try to restart her career:

"I weighed the hazards of show business against the security of private life, and I decided to return to acting."

Huntsville, Ala.—Col. John C. Nickerson, on the punishment he expects to receive at his trial for leaking guided missile secrets:

"I don't think I will get more than a reprimand, which is all I deserve."

Williamsburg, Va.—Democratic Gov. Stephen L. R. McNichols of Colorado, on President Eisenhower's proposed federal-state study:

"We'll cooperate one thousand per cent; we'll be the No. 1 guy in the parade."

New York—John Van Doren, 28, a university American history teacher, on his quiz expert brother Charles, his father historian, Mark, and his late uncle, author Carl:

"I'm used to being identified as my father's son or my uncle's nephew, now I'm identified as my brother's brother. Since Charlie won $129,000 on TV, I now find it exceedingly easy to cash a check."
