Lion Auxiliaries Enjoy Convention Fun

Two heads are better than one, Mrs. Lee Mellich and Mrs. Kenneth Campbell, said at the fun breakfast Friday morning which started the state Lady Lions convention held in Medford June 20 through 22. Theme used throughout the convention was "Heaven in '57" which accounts for the angel costume worn by the co-chairmen of the auxiliary events.

Mrs. Burton Dunn, Salem, state president of the Lions auxiliary, (left) and Mrs. F. L. Thompson Jr., Sutherlin, first vice-president, look at a "heavenly pixie" on its swing, part of the decorations at the Friday breakfast. Ceramic skunks for "heaven scent" were on the speaker's table while blue paper strips running the length of each table held milk bottles for the Milky Way.

Heavenly hats were worn for the Friday noon luncheon at Medford High school by the Lady Lions. Mrs. Randall Clark, Oakridge, had the largest hat with a pine forest balanced on her head. Mrs. William Wiswall, Portland, received the prize for most novel hat decorated with cocktail napkins complete with cocktail glass, straw, and orange slice. A parade of hats was held prior to the judging.

Miss Nancy Stickley, daughter of John L. Stickley, Charlotte, N. C., president of Lions International, helps her mother, Mrs. Stickley, into one of the "heavenly creations" made for them by the host auxiliaries. The Stickleys attended the state convention here prior to traveling to San Francisco for the International Lions convention last week.

Sweepstakes winner at the luncheon was Mrs. Ray Berger, Eugene, whose hat was a model of the Golden Gate bridge plugging the International Lions convention in San Francisco. The hat, complete with sail boats, tea cartons, and cable car, included a pine tree labeled "Emerald Empire." Mrs. Scott Foster, president of the Cedar Hills auxiliary, was third in the "most heavenly" division with her cloud and harp.

Mrs. J. A. Tomjack, president of the Medford Lady Lions, and Mrs. Warren Brenner, president of Crater Lady Lions, admire the decorations Friday evening prior to the governor's banquet at Hedrick Junior High school. Decorations for the different events were arranged by various auxiliaries in the valley. The convention closed Saturday with a variety show and dance attended by both the Lions and auxiliary club members.

All conventions begin with registration and here Mrs. John M. Cook (left) of Phoenix, who was in charge of registration, assisted by Mrs. Norman Williams, president of Phoenix Lions auxiliary, register Mrs. Rena M. Howe, secretary-elect of the Shady Cove-Trail Lions auxiliary, and Mrs. Earl Sheppard, vice-president-elect of the Shady Cove-Trail auxiliary. Registration started Thursday morning at the Jackson hotel.
