Four Rescued from Shark Infested Sea

Avalon, Calif. — The British freighter SS Levenpool late Friday rescued two men and two women who were adrift in a small dinghy and capsized 25 foot catamaran for more than four hours in shark infested waters 25 miles southeast of Catalina island.

Rescued were Albert L. Safstrom and his wife, Helen, of West Los Angeles; Howard B. Ekwwith of Santa Monica and Doris Prendergast of West Los Angeles.

Safstrom, owner of the catamaran, said he and his friends left San Diego Friday morning on a 10-day vacation. He said a hole was ripped in the bottom of one of the catamaran's two hulls 16 miles southeast of Avalon harbor and the craft capsized a short time later.

Safstrom insisted that his guests board a small dinghy which had a capacity of two. He and his wife climbed onto the hull of the overturned catamaran.

Scientist Says He Hopes Nuclear Arms Won't Be Used in War

By JOSEPH L. MYLER
United Press Correspondent

Washington — A scientist Ralph E. Lapp adds the 14 million-volt neutron to the 5,000-mile ICBM and comes up with what looks to him like a powerful military argument for the "dirty" H-bomb.

Lapp, who worked with the wartime atomic project, favors rigid international limits on H-bomb testing. He is all for "clean" weapons with no radioactive fallout — if they can be perfected. He hopes nuclear arms will never be used in war.

Disarmament Falls
But if disarmament fails and the Soviet-U.S. race for the intercontinental ballistic missile continues, Lapp fears that military logic is on the side of dirty warheads.

The 14-million-volt neutron is part of that logic. The difficulty, if not impossibility, of making a completely accurate ICBM is another. For the ICBM to be any good as a weapon, it must pack tremendous destructive power in the most compact possible package.

In the present state of nuclear weaponry that point, Lapp believes, to a dirty bomb like the 15 megaton (15 million tons of TNT) monster tested by the United States in March, 1954.

Inert Natural Uranium
That weapon owed close to two-thirds of its violence and the bulk of its radioactive dirtiness to a jacket of normally inert natural uranium which was made to fission by the high-energy neutrons created by the bomb's hydrogen fusion reaction. Neutrons of much less energy are the subnuclear particles which trigger self-sustaining fission chain reactions which make possible both A-bombs for war and atomic power plants for peace.

A pure H-bomb would be a clean weapon because its fusion reaction generates no radioactive byproducts. All fission weapons, on the other hand, are dirty because of the products of fission are radioactively "hot."

FBI Arrests Seaman For Ship Attack
San Francisco — The Federal Bureau of Investigation Saturday arrested a merchant seaman who is accused of attacking three of his fellow crewmen with an ice pick while the ship was en route from Baltimore to San Francisco.

H. G. Foster, special agent in charge of the FBI here, said Valentin Alvarez, 57, Brooklyn, N.Y., was seized when his ship, the Kenmar, docked in San Francisco. The assault allegedly took place Friday.

Alvarez will be charged and brought before the U. S. commissioner here Monday. He was taken to the San Francisco City prison to await that appearance.

Audry Points to Need For Improvement
Washington — Sen. Allen J. Ellender said last night the havoc or Hurricane Audrey clearly shows the need for "some improvements in our hurricane warning system."

The Louisiana Democrat joined — to a lesser extent — criticism of the U.S. weather bureau voiced by his colleague, Sen. Russell B. Long (D-La.).

Ellender said in his weekly radio broadcast over a New Orleans station that "generally speaking, the weather bureau did a commendable job" in warning inhabitants of the low-lying Louisiana coastal areas which took the savage brunt of the hurricane.

However, he said, "there is some room for improvement" and "better methods of tracking gulf storms must be devised."

Workers have recovered 311 bodies in southwest Louisiana and said that 116 persons still are missing.

Civil Rights Bill May Be Considered In Senate Monday
Washington — The Senate plunges Monday into a civil rights bill fight which could bring all other pending legislation to a dead stop.

At 2 p.m. (EDT) Senate Republican Leader William F. Knowland (Calif.) will move that the Senate take up the measure endorsed by President Eisenhower and already passed by the House. This will signal the start of a Southern Democratic filibuster which could last indefinitely.

Knowland himself says the fight "easily could and probably will" tie up the Senate for at least eight weeks. But he is optimistic that the fight will bring victory to pro-civil rights forces and finally clear the way for "quite a bit of legislation."

Thinks Otherwise
Sen. Richard B. Russell (D-Ga.), a leader of the Southern bloc, thinks otherwise. He and his Dixie colleagues are ready for any endurance contest required. In past years, such talk-a-thons have killed bills intended principally for protection of Negroes.

If Knowland is right the regular session of Congress could continue beyond Labor Day for the first time since 1951.

Meantime, the president's legislative program seems all but doomed. Even if the House acts on major bills — and many are opposed by Eisenhower's own party — they will have no chance as long as the Senate is deadlocked.

In this category are bills for federal aid to school construction, immigration law revisions, "clean" elections, expanding coverage of the national minimum wage law, postal rate increases, and measures to overturn Supreme Court decisions on subversives and exposing FBI files to public view.

'Oklahoma' Scheduled For Showing Here
"Oklahoma," the film version of the successful Broadway musical comedy, will open at the Craterian theater here Thursday, according to Robert Corbin, Oregon-California theaters manager.

He said Medford is one of the first of the nation's smaller communities to see the film, which will be presented here at popular prices, following its earlier roadshow run.

38 Said Dead From Heat in Mexico

Mexicali, Mexico — Temperatures of 128 degrees and more have caused at least 38 deaths here in the past five days, it was reported Saturday.

Health authorities said at least 100 more persons are in hospitals in "critical" condition suffering from insolation.

Meanwhile, the weather bureau said there are no signs of a letup in the worst heat wave in the history of this Baja California city located across the border from Calexico, Calif.

Most of the deaths have occurred in the poorer sections of the town, notorious for their lack of medical facilities.

The municipal hospital, built more than 20 years ago, is insufficient to handle "hundreds" of other insolation cases, officials said.

Field laborers who have concentrated here seeking jobs on U.S. farms have created an even more serious problem, and plans are underway to return them to their hometowns.

Humphrey Says Steel Increases Are Nonsense
Washington — Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (D-Minn.) said Saturday the steel industry's argument that higher wages forced the recent $6 a ton steel price increase is "a lot of plain unadulterated nonsense."

The said the increases were an invitation to federal price control.

During the Olympic games as a test the United Press sent a message around the world in less than 60 seconds.

Three Arrested for Aiding in Escape

Culver City, Calif. — FBI agents Saturday arrested a Culver City man and his wife and a 21-year-old woman on suspicion of aiding two prisoners to escape from a work party at Ft. MacArthur on June 5.

Agents identified the suspects as Mr. and Mrs. John Mulvey of Culver City and Mary Ann Willis, 21. They were booked in Los Angeles county jail and ordered held for arraignment before U.S. Commissioner Theodore Hocke on Monday.

John F. Malone, special agent in charge of the Los Angeles FBI office, said a truck used by Patrick Lindsey Muldrew Jr. and Donald Wayne Gates to escape from Ft. MacArthur, was found abandoned in Wilmington and the men took a cab to the Mulvey's home. He said the escapees received clothing from the Mulvey's and the prison garb was burned in the backyard.

According to Malone, the Mulveys drove Muldrew to the home of Miss Willis where he obtained money and additional clothing. Muldrew was arrested the same day by FBI agents in Culver City and Gates was seized in El Centro three days later. Both had been serving terms for illegally transporting stolen cars across state lines.
