Famed Cellist Said Showing Improvement

San Juan, P. R. — Doctors attending Pablo Casals expressed satisfaction today at the famed cellist's rate of recovery from a heart attack April 16.

Casals visited an exhibit at the University of Puerto Rico Monday night, his first appearance at a public affair since the attack. The 80-year-old Spanish musician now practices the cello daily and takes walks along the seashore.

Bids Called for New Lookout Tower

Portland—Bids will be opened at 2 p.m. July 19 in Portland by the forest service for construction of a lookout tower at Hall Point in the Rogue River National forest.

The forest service plans to build several other lookout towers in Oregon and Washington, it was reported.

Towers will be prefabricated treated timber for structures of 20, 30 and 41-foot heights and approximately 15-foot square dimensions. Prefabrication, however, is not complete and some furnished materials will have to be cut at each site, the forest service said.
