

Ginger Rogers Sheds Her Fourth Husband

Santa Monica, Calif. — Film queen Ginger Rogers has been granted a divorce from her fourth husband, youthful French actor Jacques Bergerac, on routine grounds of cruelty.

The blonde, 45-year-old actress Tuesday obtained the divorce in Superior court after testifying that Bergerac, 30, stayed away from home for long periods and often would not speak to her for weeks—"even at the dinner table."

Miss Rogers met the actor in Europe and they were married at Palm Springs, Calif., Feb. 7, 1953. The couple separated last May 3.

Cargo Unloaded From Stranded Ship

Hamilton, Bermuda — Cargo, fuel and passengers were being unloaded today from the British liner Reina Del Pacifico to lighten the vessel before new attempts are made to pull her free from a coral reef trap.

There was growing belief in local shipping circles that the 17,682-ton luxury liner may never be refloated. The Reina Del Pacifico, carrying some 700 passengers, jammed hard aground between two coral reefs leading out of Hamilton harbor Monday and has resisted efforts to free since.

The Family Council

Editor's note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual report. The Family Council does not give advice, it merely reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Vera F.—Mike should leave Cecile on her own.

Mike F.—I have tried to be a real father to her.

Vera F.—My husband and I have been married five years and have had only one real source of trouble—his younger sister. She is 15 years old and a regular pain in the neck. He worries more about her than about our two children.

Mike's father died 10 years ago. Mike was 17 and took over as head of the family. He took hold of his father's business and he sent two younger brothers through college—not going himself, although he has more than enough ability.

The brothers are now on their own, but Mike keeps doing extravagant things for Cecile. He buys her expensive presents which she never uses, and has made out his will and insurance so that Cecile benefits as much as our children. Cecile already has money left her by her father. She is a nasty, surly girl who never smiles or appreciates what is done for her. He should leave her on her own.

Mike F.—It would be hard to recognize Cecile from Vera's description. Actually, she is very sweet, shy girl. It isn't that she doesn't appreciate what is done for her, but just that she doesn't want me to give her things. She has often said in so many words that she knows Vera doesn't like it and that she'd rather not have any presents.

Cecile was only 5 years old when our father died and it was a terrible shock to her. For a long time afterward she would have terrible nightmares and was cally frightened. The doctor said she would need lots of affection to regain her feeling of security.

I have tried hard to be a real father to Cecile. Yet I can't seem to make her happy. She never comes to me with any of her problems and I feel this is Vera's fault. Vera does not make her feel welcome in our home. My wife is a jealous woman.

The Council: Mike has made his mistake in attempting to be "a real father" to Cecile. This is impossible and can only result in the kind of antagonism that his sister and his wife feel for one another.

Cecile's position is a very unfortunate one. She has been encouraged to feel that her brother is really her father and she is now excluded from his household. Mike himself feels guilty about this and tries to save her feelings with expensive presents.

She bitterly shows that she can't be bought off so easily. She can't put the blame on any devoted brother, so she puts it on his jealous wife.

Mike is Cecile's big brother—no more or less. He should try to stop feeling himself a father to her and then he will treat her in a manner more appropriate to their real situation. He should not be buying her expensive presents, but should remember her birthday and show an interest in her day-to-day activities. He should show her that he expects her to be an aunt, not a jealous rival to his children.

Vera can also help this situation by trying to keep her jealousy under control and treating Cecile as a friendly, grown-up sister-in-law. She should try to forget about the will and insurance—as long as she and her children are properly provided for.

Water Regulations

MEDFORD WATER COMMISSION

WE ASK YOUR SUPPORT

Now that the summer months are here, we are asking you to be conscious of the water you use, particularly on hot days and during dry periods, and to avoid unnecessary wastage of one of our community's most valuable assets.

For better utilization of the public water supply and assurance of ample quantities of water at proper pressures for domestic, commercial and fire fighting needs, the regulations governing the use of water are as follows:

WHEN THE FIRE SIREN SOUNDS, a neighbor is in distress and you can help him. Turn off your lawn sprinklers and other non-essential water uses during the emergency.

OPEN HOSES ARE NOT ALLOWED. An open hose robs pressure from your other sprinklers and from your neighbors' hoses.

WASTE OF WATER IS PROHIBITED. You can stop waste and save money by being careful not to allow water to run to waste down sidewalks, streets or gutters as a result of sprinkling lawns, gardens or parking strips and by repairing all plumbing leaks and closing faucets when they are not actually being used. Wasted water costs just as much to deliver as water that is put to use.

SPRINKLING STREETS. The use of water through a hose for sprinkling streets is forbidden under all circumstances:

In addition to the above regulations, the following hints may be helpful in your use of water:

WHEN SPRINKLING YOUR LAWN, get the most for your money—use water wisely. Experts say that it is better to soak an established lawn to a depth of several inches once or twice a week than to give your grass a light sprinkling daily. They also suggest watering only in the cool hours of the day. As the heaviest demand on the water system comes in the late afternoon and evening, it is suggested that you sprinkle in the early morning.

WATER FOR AIR CONDITIONERS of the evaporative type, should be carefully controlled. Maximum efficiency from an evaporative type air conditioner is obtained when the entire area of the pads is kept damp. Any water allowed to run off from the conditioner is wasted.

— USE WATER WISELY.

HOMELESS—Victims of a series of earthquakes that rocked Iran huddle together with their meager possessions after they were forced to flee their homes in Zirab. Some 1500 persons were reported dead, and officials said the toll could reach 5000. Another 50,000 have been made homeless by the disaster.
