The Medical Roundup

The Man Who Reads Up About His Disease

There is many a patient who, when told that he or she has a rare disease, that he has never heard of before, wants to learn everything he can about it. I am sorry to say that usually when he turns to his doctor for the information, this busy man says he just hasn't the time to stop and give a lecture on the subject.

Then the man may go to the public library to see what he can find. Sometimes he gets the information he needs, but at other times he gets somewhat misinformed and hence badly upset.

The trouble is that his boy may have had, let us say, a mild attack of infectious mononucleosis, and by the time he gets to the doctor he may be well on his way to recovery. But when his father goes to the library he may read that, in rare cases of an unusually severe type serious complications can ensue. With this, he may become terribly alarmed and very pessimistic, when there was no need for this.

I am reminded of what wise old Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes once wrote. He said that a patient is entitled to know the truth about his disease, but not necessarily all of the possibly very disturbing truth that the doctor knows. For instance, if a man has an easily cured cancer of low malignancy, why tell him all that can happen to a person with an almost incurable cancer of high malignancy?

Protecting Eyes in School Shops

Recently, the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness (1790 Broadway, New York 19, N.Y.) pointed out that although for some time factories have been insisting that workmen in their shops wear goggles to protect their eyes from flying fragments of metal, such goggles are not yet compulsory in the shops and laboratories of high schools and colleges. As a result, terrible things happen.

Synthetic Hormone Claimed Effective As Contraceptive

New York—A synthetic hormone, claimed to be 100 per cent effective as an oral contraceptive, will be on sale throughout the nation by fall, the New York World-Telegram and Sun reported today.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration already has approved the pill, though only as aids for menstrual ills—and they are now being sold on prescription in California, according to the Scripps Howard agency.

It said the pill has successfully prevented conception in extensive tests in Japan and leading hospitals throughout the United States, according to a spokesman for G. D. Searle and Company of Lindenhurst, N. J., the manufacturers.

The manufacturer also called attention to the fact that it was not marketing the pill as a contraceptive but only as a treatment for menstrual ills.

The pill, known as enovid, is one of several similar pills being developed independently throughout the nation, the story said.

The pill is said to prevent ovulation when taken every day from the fifth to the 25th day after menstruation. This procedure must be repeated every month to be effective.

Must Be Used With Care

The newspaper quoted several medical authorities who warned that the pills must be used with the utmost care because of the possibility of side effects.

It quoted a spokesman for the New York Academy of Medicine that it was conceivable the pills could permanently arrest ovulation and that women who wanted to become pregnant at a later date might not be able to.

There are more than 4,500 different varieties of grasses throughout the world.
