Nuclear Weapon Testing Discussed by Dr. Nolde

Editor's Note: The author of this week's religious column is director of the Commission of the Churches on International Affairs. The commission was established by the World Council of Churches. The writer discusses problems involved in attempting to limit or stop testing of nuclear weapons.

By DR. O. FREDERICK NOLDE
Written for United Press

The current public discussions about experimental testing of larger nuclear weapons frequently fail to take into account the fact that this problem does not stand by itself.

The concentration upon the dangers of continued testing—both for present and for future generations—is to be welcomed as a prick to conscience and a stimulus to action. However, other problems which are closely related to the testing of nuclear weapons ought to be seen in their proper context if mankind is to move more surely toward a healthy and peaceful world society. Discussions may become more intelligent and meaningful if the inter-related problems are looked at together.

One significant point seems to be emerging out of the varied and often conflicting scientific opinion aired in the present debate. Since there is conceivable danger in the radioactivity to which man is normally exposed in his environment, any increase except for approved medical purposes is not good. The objective must therefore clearly be to end or to control tests under international auspices.

How shall this be done and under what conditions. Differing approaches to this question bring forth a variety of answers but two points of view seem to be most prominent. Those who believe that the danger to health in the present circumstances is exceedingly grave argue that the tests should be stopped immediately and they are only secondarily concerned with related problems or safeguards to ensure compliance with treaties. Others, while recognizing a danger to health but not considering it of immediate gravity, believe that a margin of time is allowed for negotiating agreements which will most fully utilize available scientific knowledge and will as adequately as possible protect the security of nations.

As the spotlight has been turned on the hazards of experimental tests, public attention has increasingly been directed to the radioactive dangers in the peaceful uses of atomic energy, as well as to dangers in practices which have been accepted as commonplace, such as x-ray. The prospect that mankind is destined to live with this newly harnessed power—even after military aspects of nuclear weapons have been resolved—underscores the importance of safeguarding against the dangers from the peaceful uses of atomic energy as efforts go forward to reap their benefits.

Not unrelated to testing is the reliance upon the possession of nuclear weapons as a deterrent to aggression. With the apparent decrease in manpower and conventional armaments, will there be recourse to atomic weapons which have been tested, even if only limited conflict breaks out? If this should prove to be the case, and Pandora's box is opened, one must contemplate the awesome possibility that either party to the conflict will be

Missionary Volunteer Meeting Saturday

"Share Your Faith" will be the topic of the Missionary Volunteer meeting to be held in the Valley View Seventh-day Adventist church at 6:45 p.m. Saturday. Miss Carolyn Glassford, stage director, who will present the program was one of 7000 young people to attend the recent Youth's Congress in Spokane, Wash., and the program Saturday will be based on the theme of the congress, "Sharing the Faith of our Father."

The Saturday program will include a story of missionary work in Mexico, to be told by Miss Marjorie Hanson, and Miss Avis Bissinger will speak on what young people may accomplish through the literature ministry. "One Day at a Time" will be the subject of a talk by Mrs. Louise Nogle, and Miss Ruth Wilbur will present the poem, "The World's Bible."

"Obstacles to the development of the Christian home peculiar to Korea lie largely in the Confucian influence which is so largely dominant still even in the Christian families and in the leadership of the church," reports Miss Irma Highbaugh, Kansas-born missionary leader in the Republic of Korea.

"Domination of the father and a low position of women and children are so frequent as to constitute an obstacle. 'What is most needed in a Christian home' often brought the answer: 'Obedience.' When asked 'obedience of whom to whom' the answer was obedience of wives to husbands and children to parents. Often panels of the youths themselves decided that one could not marry without father's permission and there was a strong opinion expressed that suicide was the only way out.

"Perhaps, most devastating was the dislike expressed for family prayers because father always conducted it, the talk was not understood by children and no one else ever had a chance to read the Bible or to pray. The tendency of the Korean people to speak in abstractions far remote from life is another obstacle to Christian family living.

"We Koreans know the abstract things of our religion but we don't know how to apply it daily," said one pastor.

Multi-Racial Church in Chicago

A new church home for a young Japanese Methodist congregation, which says it will serve Protestants of all races and ethnic backgrounds, has been consecrated in downtown Chicago by Bishop Charles W. Brashers, of the Chicago area.

The new building will serve the Christian Fellowship church, composed predominantly of American-born citizens of Japanese ancestry. The 108-member congregation was originally one of several Protestant groups formed to serve these people who were relocated in Chicago during World War II. It was known at first as the Armitage Avenue Young People's church, since its organization was sponsored by the Armitage Avenue Methodist church. Though many members were Methodist, the church was interfaith in character and included several Buddhists.

In 1950 the church was organized as a regular Methodist church and in 1953 the Rev. Victor Fujii was appointed pastor. The present building was purchased with funds raised by the congregation and with a grant from the Chicago Methodist Home Missionary and Church Extension society.
