

Bridge Club Adopts Korean Orphan

Wichita, Kan.—The game of bridge serves as the span between a group of Wichita women and some war orphans in Korea. The women, most of them mothers themselves, individually contribute $1.50 each month toward adoption and to sending food to children made homeless and orphaned by the Korean war.

The originator of the idea is Mrs. George Graff True Jr., who said that if women are going to sit around playing cards they should "be accomplishing something useful while they're at it." The women have adopted one seven-year-old child already—Kyong Sook Kim, from Seoul—and hope she is the first of many they will be able to care for. Mrs. True says she got the idea last October after she heard stories about Korean children "licking discarded tin food cans for nourishment."

Shortly afterward, she organized what the bridge group now calls the "Hope Club." She said other Wichita women now are organizing their own groups, based on the same idea. Mrs. True, who has two young sons, exchanges letters with the Korean children frequently. The girl's parents were killed by red Chinese troops.

She believes she may have started a project with a future to it. Said Mrs. True, "If we could get all the bridge-playing mothers of America interested, what couldn't we do!"

Quilting Hobby Becomes Regular Job for Grandma

Desmet, S. D.—Mrs. Ella Hamen, 76, who started quilting as a hobby, now considers it a full-time job.

This grandmother of six devotes six to eight hours a day to making quilts of her own design. She began quilting 15 years ago, and now has finished 150, with orders for dozens more already on schedule.

The energetic grandmother said her quilting really started for fun but turned out to be so profitable she now considers it a sort of career.

She explained, "I was reading a farm paper and noticed an advertisement asking anyone who could make a quilt to write to a lady in Ellendale, N. D. 'I wrote her on the spur of the moment. And it wasn't long before the material came in the mail. First thing I knew, I was in business.'"

Mrs. Hamen has made several "state" quilts—each block representing a different state. The flower or animal representing each state is embroidered in the appropriate square.

Mrs. Hamen has made quilts with wedding ring designs for brides; and quilts with prayers and angels stamped and embroidered on the blocks, for babies.

Mrs. Hamen, a widow who has lived alone since the death of a son last summer has a few other projects. She baby-sits, crochets and raises multi-colored geraniums.

Activity seems to be the key to Mrs. Hamen's spryness. She said she never has been sick, and the only time she ever needed a doctor was when her children were born.

American Women Have Artistic Color Taste

New York—The American woman is becoming an artist in use of color in the home, says James Seeman, a designer of wallpaper murals.

"She's learned the value of an accent," said Seeman. We've learned to accept rooms with a spot of red rather than a whole red room; a dash of bright orange instead of an orange wall.

This, said the designer, is one of the most encouraging trends in modern home decoration, and an indication that American taste is developing artistically.

Seeman said his industry has been particularly aware of the trend. Wallpaper mural designers concentrated on scenic patterns which leave large areas of space open, to offset the pattern, and provide rest areas for the eye.

"This color and spot decoration method also helps the home-maker plan her decorating scheme," he said.

For example, if there are rich red flowers scattered on the wallpaper or in draperies, the home-maker knows she can and should use some red in the room, in throw pillows a lampshade or a chair, to pick up the accent.

Fragrant slices of orange and prune bread richly studded with crisp walnuts make a bread to serve with luncheon salads. Use chopped cooked prunes, ground orange and coarsely broken walnuts in the dough.

A crown lamb roast surrounded by a circle of canned cling peach halves filled with mint jelly makes a festive entree. Serve the jelly-filled peaches cold or broil them a few minutes to heat through and glaze.
