

Fliers Put on Show For Jamboree Scouts; Boys Throng Exhibits

Valley Forge—Air Force pilots put on an acrobatic display at speeds of more than 700 miles an hour Tuesday for thousands of boy campers attending the fourth National Boy Scout Jamboree.

The fliers were the Thunderbirds, the crack Air Force four-some of stunters flying F100 Sabers.

Scouts Jam Exhibits

In a more reflective mood, scouts jammed the highly educational exhibits erected and run by three government agencies: The Soil Conservation, Fish, and Wild Life Services, in cooperation with the conservation departments of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York.

There are three main exhibits showing how nature maintains a balance between soil, water, plants, fish, and animals—the major factors in nature's equation.

Of all displays, these are the most overcrowded as boys line up for hundreds of yards waiting for admission to the half hour shows which run from sun up to sun down.

Biggest Program

The exhibits are said to be the biggest single program in conservation education ever undertaken by the federal government. One exhibit using fans and watering cans shows how wind and rain erodes away nature's most valuable asset—soil. Another demonstrates what makes waters hospitable to fish. Conservation men have built three streams about 100 feet long incorporating improvements on nature such as log dams, rock jetties, and other cover which can make streams friendly to game fish.

Other attractions such as flood control exhibits, small plantations to show how trees grow, and forest control are all incorporated into the solid conservation education the scouts are receiving at the jamboree.

The search was called off after L. H. Weed, Portland boating enthusiast, was located safely tied up at St. Helens on the Columbia river.

Weed had denied earlier Coast Guard claims that he failed to report a change of plans, saying he turned back from a trip because of heavy swells and called the Point Adams lifeboat station.

Today the Coast Guard said the change of plans had been received at Point Adams but that the man who took the report failed to notify his officer of the day who later ordered the search.
