

Ashland Youth Takes Grand Prize in First Porcupine Contest

John A. Bowman, School House ranch, Ashland, with a total of 361 porcupines, won the first grand prize, a Winchester automatic shotgun, during the first year of a campaign to reduce the porcupine population in Jackson county sponsored jointly by the Medford Kiwanis club and the Jackson County Chamber of Commerce.

The winner of the second grand prize, a pair of binoculars, was Ronald Scholer, star route box 77, Ashland, with 188 porcupines. Clara Jean Fink, formerly of Eagle Point, now living in Arcata, Calif., won third prize, a scope-mounted 22 rifle, with a total of 182 porcupines.

Fourth Quarter Winners
Winners of the prizes for the fourth quarter of fiscal year 1957 were Ronald Scholer, 39 porcupines; John A. Bowman, 32 porcupines; and Roland Peyton, Coleman Creek rd., Medford, 22 porcupines. Prizes consisted of various items of camping equipment.

The year-long contest was limited to youths from 12 to 18 years of age who are residents of Jackson county. Youths who entered the contest for the prizes during the year accounted for a total of 2,399 porcupines.

Money for the prizes, which were displayed throughout the year at the various sporting goods stores in Medford, Ashland and Central Point, was donated by 13 lumber concerns in Jackson county.

Bounty on Noses
In addition to prizes, Jackson county paid a bounty of $1 for each porcupine nose. The county clerk reported that 6,946 porcupine bounties was paid during the year. The Prospect office of Elk Lumber company also paid $1 bounty. The office reported a total of 629 porcupines accounted for during the year through their company.

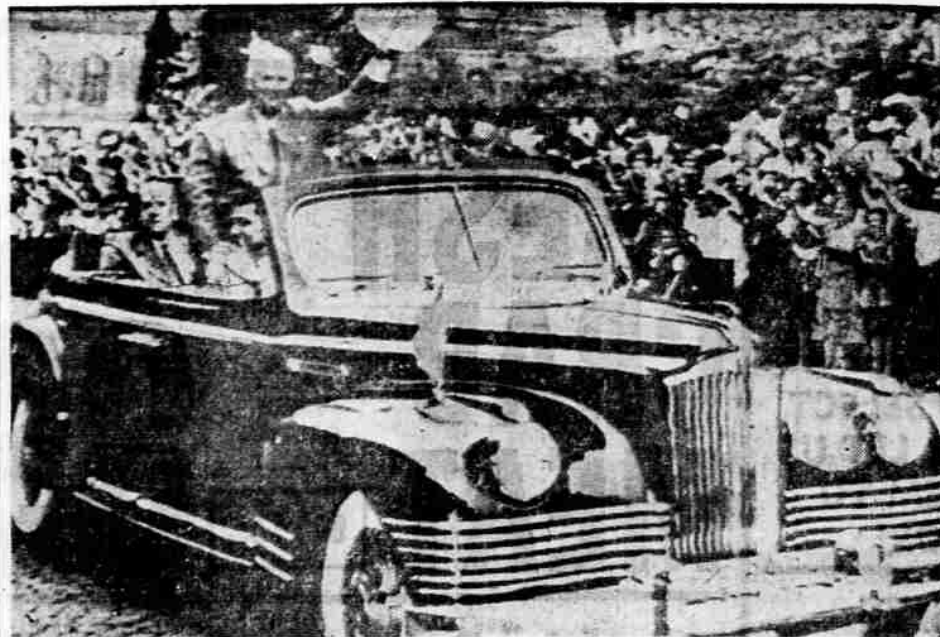

Foresters have estimated that a porcupine during its lifetime damages timber stands, mostly young ponderosa pine trees, to the extent of at least $200 in value. If this amount is multiplied by the number of porcupines killed during the past year, the first year of the campaign has resulted in a long-term benefit to the county's forest economy of approximately $1,500,000, according to the Kiwanis club.

Despite the large number of porcupines killed during the past year the animals are still plentiful so the Medford Kiwanis club is considering sponsoring another contest and offering prizes for youths in the county.

Reduced Bounty

Jackson county also will continue to pay a bounty. However, it will be reduced to 50 cents per nose instead of $1. This action was taken because Klamath county is offering a bounty for the first time. Since the Klamath bounty is 50 cents and since the two counties are adjacent Jackson county changed to 50 cents so that the amount of the bounties would be the same.

Prizes were awarded to the winners at the July 17 meeting of the Kiwanis club and all the winners have been invited to appear on television at 6 p.m. on Thursday, July 18, with Kiwanians Jennings Pierce and Chester Wendt.

CZECH CROWDS GREET RED LEADER—Soviet Communist Party boss Nikita S. Khrushchev waves to the crowd as he rides through the streets of Prague. With him is Czech President Antonin Zapotocky (extreme left). In a speech, Khrushchev charged that the West is trying to start a "counter-revolution" in Czechoslovakia and other eastern European countries.

Planes To Spray Against Jack Pine Budworm

Madison, Wis. — Several tri-motor airplanes will be used to spray 170,000 acres of Wisconsin forest land against jack pine budworms.

The Wisconsin Conservation Department contracted with Vancouver, Wash., firm to do the spraying after a test program last year showed that 95 per cent of the budworms in a sprayed area were killed.

Benton Harbor, Mich. — Squads of radio ham operators and television repairmen volunteered to investigate reports of television interference in the Benton Harbor-St. Joseph area. Two-man teams will check complaints of poor reception in an effort to obviate ham operators of blame.

Radar Pictures Of State Weather New Forecast Tool

Chicago — Radar pictures of state-wide weather systems are being developed as a tool for forecasting thunderstorms and tornadoes.

Two University of Chicago experts say that radar shows clearly how one-mile wide clouds expand into larger weather groupings that often spawn severe storms.

The researchers are Tetsuya Fujita, research associate, and H. Albert Brown, instructor at the department of meteorology.

Radar photos taken every minute form a graphic biography of four such storm systems they studied. The weather pattern is known as a mesosystem, which extends from 10 to 200 miles in radius.

According to Fujita and Brown, the beginning of a mesosystem is a column of water condensation in the atmosphere a mile wide and two miles high.

These tiny water droplets of condensation, growing in size and number, form a dense barrier that reflects radar waves.

Cloud Sequence
Radar photos show that the condensation grows into small clouds that disappears in about 20 minutes. Then several new ones form, grow larger and disappear again. The entire sequence often is repeated for as long as 12 hours, the research showed.

Fujita and Brown said the situation occurs in areas of high winds, pressure changes and precipitation.

The original column of condensation is fed by water vapor rising on currents of warm air until the condensation droplets reach a critical size and fall as rain.

The falling rain, evaporating as it plummets earthward, leaves behind a large mass of cold air, which minutes later sinks to the ground under its own weight and causes surface temperatures to drop as much as 30 degrees, the meteorologists said.

On the radar screen, the dissipating cloud can be seen to diminish and vanish. But at the same time new ones are born in its path. These dissipate and are replaced by newer and bigger ones until at last a squall line, or echelon of thunderstorms is formed.

Fujita and Brown believe the small, 15-mile-wide cyclones often associated with tornadoes probably result from swirling eddies of air and moisture formed by the high winds in the squall line.
