On The Side

(Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Brooklyn had been a city for 64 years when in a moment of weakness in 1898 it agreed to become a mere borough of New York City. If Brooklyn had remained a distinct municipality it would now be rated as the third largest city in the United States.

Among The Married
Ever head of a wife being charged with "husband beating"? Neither have I. However, their evidence indicates some wives really get rough with their husbands. This is especially true of petite wives. It was recently revealed in Pittsburgh that a five-footer wife tossed her six-footer husband to the floor and held him there while she washed out his mouth with soap. She objected to his excessive use of profanity. This recalls that Mark Twain's wife objected to his profanity so he originated a system of swearing that eliminated said profanity. That is he used such expressions "Gee Whizz," "By Jiminy," "By the Great Horn Spoon," and so on.

Please Note
"At the Same Address Since 1865." Such is the slogan of the "Old Original Bookbinder's Restaurant" located at 125 Walnut st., Philadelphia. In the same location for 92 years sounds like a restaurant record. Or can you top it? Incidentally, there is another Bookbinder's Restaurant in Philadelphia. Hence use of "The Old Original" in name of aforementioned eatery. This reminds me there once were three restaurants on Third ave. near 57th st., Manhattan, named as follows: "Joe's," "The Original Joe's" and "The Original Original Joe's."

Asking
Queries from clients. Q. What is the origin of the saying that a man, when burdened with a losing proposition has "a white elephant on his hands"? A. The King of Siam frequently gave one of his subjects a present of a white elephant. In Siam the white elephant is sacred. So the receiver of the gift could not give away or destroy the elephant. He, therefore, was burdened with the expense of keep- ing the animal. Hence the saying aforementioned.

So They Say
Have you a female child born under Sagittarius? If so, you may have a future singing star.

The Family Council

Editor's note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual report. The Family Council does not give advice; it merely reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Martin P. — My wife is a blabber-mouth.
Lucy P. — I try to get help with our problems.

Martin P. — My wife and I have been married ten years and have four children. We've had our ups and downs with illnesses and money problems, but just the same we could be a lot happier than we've been if she'd stop being such a blabber-mouth.

Lucy P. is the type who goes running to the telephone to tell her whole family and all her friends about anything that is on her mind at the moment. These things get around and I sometimes run into people in business who seem to know more about me and my troubles than I do.

Sometimes I think that Lucy is deliberately trying to talk me down and show everyone what a shmo I am. I've made plenty of mistakes, I know. I haven't given Lucy an easy time of it, but does everyone have to know?

Lucy P. — Martin hasn't told about half the trouble we've had. We are in debt, but he still lets people take advantage of him. He doesn't have a good business head, but he refuses to quit business and take a job. He has no confidence in himself, but he won't go to others for help.

When Martin comes and tells me about his different problems, I don't know what to tell him because I don't know about these things. I go to people who know more about it and are able to advise us. I have gotten a lot of useful advice, but Martin refuses to take it.

As for Martin's accusation that I try to "talk him down," that's ridiculous. I love him very much and want everybody to think the world of him, as I do. That's why it hurts me when he gets into a mess.

The Council: The sad truth here is that both Martin and Lucy are largely right in their complaints. If the fault were one-sided, it would be relatively easy to get the person at fault to mend his ways. But both people here are deeply at fault, and mending things will not be easy.

Martin has had his "ups and downs" and hasn't given Lucy an easy time of it, but he expects Lucy to be a model of discretion and to keep all the pent-up dissatisfactions and disappointments inside of her, while radiating confidence and cheerfulness all around her, to reflect favorably on him.

Lucy is obviously burned up over the disappointments and frustrations of their married life and no doubt resents her husband's failure to do better for the family in a material way.

It is useless to argue which one of these two committed the original offense of resenting and misunderstanding the other, but the fact is that they are now caught up in a vicious cycle of recrimination and resentment. We are not at all inmodest when we admit that we're not at all sure we have any sure-fire advice.

We do suggest, however, that Martin and Lucy face the facts. They have four children in common, still have some respect and love for each other. They can improve their lives if each one is willing to forget about the other's faults and concentrate on remedying his own.

Suppose Martin, instead of resenting Lucy's "blabbing," were to ask her what Mr. So-and-so thought about his problem. It might possibly have the effect of inducing her to be more cautious about talking too freely to outsiders.

Lucy, on the other hand, should stop nagging Martin to quit trying to be self-employed and to surrender to a job. When she does that, she attacks his self-confidence and self-respect.

All of this advice is easy to give and admittedly hard to take. This family has suffered ten years of steady deterioration, and it will take hard and wise effort to change the trend for the better.
