You're Never Too Old To Change Your Job, Insurance Head Says

Newark, N. J.—If you're 30 years old and don't like your job. "Quit."

This is the advice of Carroll M. Shanks, who gave up a career as a law professor at the age of 32.

Today he is the $250,000-a-year president of the Prudential Insurance Co.

"You've got to like what you're doing," Shanks said in an interview at his office here. "And if you don't—you're never too old to change—provided, that is, you aren't just hopping around."

Shanks himself was 10 years married, with two small children when he decided in 1931 that teaching was not for him. He moved to a Manhattan law firm but again was disappointed. Finally, in 1932, he moved across the Hudson river to Newark and found at Prudential what he sought. By 1946 he was president of the company.

Now 58, the soft-spoken president says, "Many men leave school and pick—well, what seems a 'glamorous' field. Maybe advertising. Then they find out they're not suited for it."

"Insurance, I imagine, doesn't strike too many young people as glamorous. But for many of us it was the right field. And for a few—even in this building, I suppose—it wasn't. They'd be wise to switch."

How about the man who starts in the right field and wants to advance?

Be Informed

"I think if I had one thing to tell a man like that," Shanks said, "it would be to always take the disagreeable jobs... it's not that the man who avoids disagreeable work will necessarily get fired. He probably won't. But he won't advance either."

"But when an opening comes, when you need a branch manager, you look to the man you've come to depend on, the man you couldn't help but notice," Shanks said.

Shanks believes career opportunities are better today than ever.

"But if you turn the wrong way in the beginning, don't feel you have to stay that way." "A friend of mine just changed jobs at 57. You're never too old."

Airman Refuses To Get Short Haircut; Doesn't Want To Resemble Shaved Jackass

Fuchu, Japan—Neatly trimmed Airman 3C Donald Wheeler, Cortez, Colo., told four long-haired officers of an Air Force court martial today he refused to get a white sidewall haircut because it was "ridiculous on any human."

And the stubborn, 20-year-old airman made it clear he was against the white sidewall no matter what happened to him.

Wheeler went before a special court martial today to answer charges he disobeyed orders to get a "white sidewall" haircut, shaved sides with a fringe on the top, when he was a member of the honor guard at the United Nations-Far East Command headquarters in Tokyo.

"The white sidewall haircut is ridiculous on any human," he said.

The court martial was made up of a lieutenant colonel, two

Red Skelton Entertains Son

Rome—Comedian Red Skelton celebrated his 44th birthday Thursday night, making his famous rubbery faces for a laughing son who may not see his next birthday.

He leered. He groaned. He frowned. He snickered and sneered.

His son, Richard, 9, rocked up and down in his chair with laughter and joy as he watched the show that millions of TV fans eye each week, this time a one-man show for a one-boy audience.

It was a big night for Red in his family's eye. They secretly ordered him a chocolate birthday cake with 44 candles at Alfredo's restaurant.

They tipped the band to sing "Happy Birthday" when the big red-headed comic walked in.

But for Red it was still Richard's night, just as this whole round the world in 80 days trip is Richard's trip.

Richard, doctors say, will die of incurable leukemia. Thus far, he has outlived their predictions.

major and a captain. The colonel and two majors would never make an honor guard if short hair was a prerequisite. The captain had a crew cut, but it badly needed trimming.

The Neat and the Shaggy
Even Wheeler's civilian defense attorney and his court-appointed military attorney have used a trim. The neatest men in the room were Wheeler and his former commanding officer, 1st Lt. William Shortt of Seattle, Wash., whose haircut matched his name.

It was Shortt who ordered Wheeler to get the short trim. The haircut ordered calls for clippers all around, right up to the top which is cut short. The particular cut bares so much white scalp that it won the name "white sidewall tire" cut, a name unpleasant to Shortt who wears his hair that way.

Today's hearing was the third for Wheeler and possibly the last. Air Force officials at the 5th Air Force headquarters here stressed that Wheeler was on trial for disobeying an order and not because his haircut did not conform.

Graphic Description

Shortt took the stand first today and testified he had ordered Wheeler at least six times to get a close haircut.

Was it true, asked civilian defense attorney Murray Sprung (regular haircut) that Wheeler refused to get the haircut because "I do not want to look like a shaved jackass?"

It was true, admitted Shortt. Shortt then said the term "white sidewall" was not used by the military, that it was a "newspaper manufactured word." What the honor guard demanded, he said, was a short crew cut on the top and closely clipped sides and back.

"Everyone in the honor guard should have a crew cut similar to the type now worn by me," he said.
