

No wonder Tony Curtis loves being a movie star! He's got a lovely wife, a $100,000 mansion, a powerful foreign auto, and a host of idolizers.

OPPENHEIMER

ever leftovers his father could salvage from a small tailor shop.

The son of a Hungarian immigrant, Tony couldn't even speak English when he started grammar school but was already proficient in gang-fighting and dodging the law. The Bernie Schwartz story was headed for a Dead End finish until a truant officer dragged the boy to the Jones Memorial Settlement House where social worker Paul Schwartz—no relation—took the chip off Tony's shoulder and taught him honesty and self-respect.

Tony quit high school six months before graduation to join the Navy during World War II. Under the G. I. Bill of Rights, he later enrolled in a dramatic school, and two years later was flown to Hollywood by Universal-International for a screen tryout—and his first taste of extravagant living. He loved it.

"I felt like a king," he recalls. "A shiny studio limousine met me at the airport and whisked me to a plush suite at a swank Hollywood hotel. I slept late the next morning and had breakfast in bed for the first time in my life.

"And do you know how much dough I had? Four dollars and 12 cents. I made up my mind right then that this was the life for me."

Tony has made good both in his career and his determination to live in the unsparing movie-star tradition. He has everything the matinee idol should have, including a beautiful blonde wife, screen actress Janet Leigh.

Critics complain that Tony's success came too quickly and he can't handle his sudden wealth. But friends know better. They maintain if he were still Bernie Schwartz in the Bronx, he'd be living higher, wider, and handsomer than the guy next door.

And he'd do it so amiably that even the neighbor would like him for it.
