Good Old Days Meant Torture for Wearers Of Steel Corsets

Chicago — In Elizabethan England women went through untold torture if they cared enough about their shape to squeeze into a girdle, reports one corset firm.

Vassarite researchers said getting into a "foundation" became such a monumental task that craftsmen even put hinges on the garments to make matters easier.

Even in the early 1800's this advice was given English mothers: "Have your daughter lie face down on the ground, so that, by having a foot in the small of her back, you can secure a firm purchase on the laces."

But getting into a girdle ceased to be an engineering feat, the researchers said, when manufacturers started using modern fabrics instead of whalebone and steel "stays."

Draperies When making cotton draperies put all hems in by hand. Use long, loose slip stitches. Hand finishing means the draperies will hang better.

'Little UN' at Tennessee Keeping Stomachs Happy

By WILLIAM E. CLARK United Press Correspondent Knoxville, Tenn. — A good many ulcers among the diplomatic set might be traced to events at the United Nations in New York. But at the "little UN" near the campus of the University of Tennessee, happy stomachs are the rule.

The rambling 18-room international boarding house, which is officially registered as the "little UN" is, and has been, many things to many people from many nations.

It has provided homes for collegians from Argentina to the Philippines, has been responsible for introductions which led to five international marriages and has educated the palate of a Norwegian to appreciate the tang of a French dish of meat cooked in wine.

The White Avenue home is owned and guided by Mrs. Loretta Pruett. To this 52-year-old self-styled "mother-type," the "little UN" has satisfied "perfectly" her childhood wish to become a missionary.

Started in 1952 Mrs. Pruett is the mother of two grown sons and daughters, but it is her combined role of housemother, maitre d' and chef which now demands her time and energies.

The unique establishment got its start in 1952 when Mrs. Pruett had five boarders but was losing money. She informed her household that operations could continue only if each would bring in one additional boarder.

Armando Garcia, a Cuban, quickly rounded up 15 newcomers, all from foreign countries. Since that time, Mrs. Pruett has had as many as 21 nationalities under her roof at one time.

In dietary matters, unusual tastes are catered to. For Masamichi Kowaka of Osaka, Japan, Mrs. Pruett stocks heavy supplies of rice.

Sunday dinner is always something special. Sooner or later, every boarder has his favorite native dish whipped up for the consumption or rejection of the others.

If international incidents and cold-wars have been absent, Mrs. Pruett says it often has been despite Sabbath spreads. Boarders frankly admit the day an Indian dish was concocted, everybody but the Calcutta native showed up later at the corner hamburger stand.

A Beef Dish Boarders Omar Ali and Tayiss Hamid introduced an Arab dish which has proven the all-time favorite. It's called "Macklobi" or upside-down beef.

Browned beef is placed in a casserole. Next a layer of sliced cauliflower, fried in oil, is added.

Onion, sliced lengthwise and browned, are then laid on the mixture with rice added to cover the top. Water is poured in to cover the entire contents by about an inch. The dish is simmered under tight cover for about an hour.

Each layer, as added, is seasoned to taste with salt, pepper, thyme and majoram. "Macklobi" is served by turning the casserole upside down on a large platter.

When Mrs. Pruett is away, meal planning is left to Mauricio and Helen Fernandez.

Mauricio, a chemical engineering senior from Bogota, Colombia, has lived at the place since his freshman days. About a year ago he married Helen Steagall, a home economics major who was raised on a Tennessee farm.

Southern style cornbread has since become a favorite of Senor Fernandez and most of the other boarders. One boarder of Germanic descent, Otto Bruhn, is the acknowledged cornbread-consuming champion.

"When I'm hungry," he said, "I can easily eat 20 pieces."

Travel Becomes Less Successful For Romance

By MARY PRIME United Press Correspondent New York — Faraway fields are not so green for romance as they once were. Women who travel to meet men may be surprised to learn that American women now outnumber men as world travelers.

The U.S. Passport Office estimated that about 400,000 women travel outside the country in 1957, compared with 360,000 men.

Europe is the most popular destination for both sexes. So a spokesman for the American Express Co. advised women tourists to visit other places — Alaska, Hawaii, Africa and Japan. Many more men than women also travel to South America.

Men In The Rockies The spokesmen also suggested Hong Kong, where 170,000 tourists are expected this year. Many of these will be American servicemen stationed in the Far East.

Women with more limited budgets will find an abundance of men vacationing in the Canadian Rockies, most national parks, dude ranches and resorts where sports are the main attraction.

Passport Office figures showed that most male travelers are retired businessmen. Then come engineers, military personnel and business executives. Many doctors, dentists, lawyers, laborers, bankers and brokers also go abroad to see the sights.

Some farmers and ranchers make the trips, but only a few men in small businesses — florist shops, drug stores and interior decoration — go out of the country.

Most women tourists are housewives. Students rank second on the list, then clerks and secretaries.

Children A Problem Another problem arising from the increase in women travelers concerns children. The Passport Office predicted 48,000 Americans 20 years of age or younger will go abroad this year. Many of these are under 12 years.

One airline (TWA) said six per cent of its passengers on international flights in summer are children from two to 12 years of age. About three per cent on domestic flights are youngsters.

With more families going abroad, most European hotels have added qualified baby-sitters to their staffs. Planes and ships have special supplies and accommodations for babies, from disposable diapers and safety pins to powder and cream. Hostesses even mind Junior while parents go through customs.

One word of warning: Always notify the airline or ship if you plan to take your children and if they need special foods.

The little red dress threatens to replace the little black dress as a basic item in women's wardrobes this fall and winter. The New York Fashion Group, in a preview of fall style trends, reports "red is the single most important color family."

Blues rate next, said the Group. Other colors seen frequently include purples, magentas, yellows, and bright and dull greens.

Furniture Does Folding Tricks For Young Set

By SHERI GILES United Press Correspondent Chicago — Furniture that folds up, down, around, and practically disappears at the flick of a wrist, seems to be the byword for the younger set this year, report manufacturers at the International Home Furnishings Show.

Since suburban small-fry take their airings in the station wagon nowadays, the old-fashioned baby carriage might be on the way out, said a market spokesman.

Following up this trend, one manufacturer (Hedstrom-Union) has designed a "patio-pram," which can be set down outside the house, or folded up to be put in the car.

A pool-side cabana, a gossamer tent for mosquito-proof siestas has been put out by another (Hedrick). The tent is of transparent nylon, has a striped roof, a weathervane, and takes less than one minute to erect.

Another new conception in playpens is a fold-away circular playground made of nylon net and chromium from Thayer. The pre-school group can amuse themselves with a new sand box (Goshen Mfg. Co.) equipped with a roof or drop canvas sides. It turns into a desert house, pirate den, or anything else children feel like pretending to be.

Play yards are coming out higher than the standard, so babies can be away from drafty floors. One firm (Hopkins Mfg.) has one nine inches off the floor. And cribs are more artistic, with colorful square tiles inset on head and footboard.

Another firm (United Furniture) displays a contraction that enables the youngsters to have their fun all in one package—a combination double swing, loop, climbing pole, and basketball backboard.

Another company has a root-beer stand that looks like a drive-in.

That's so Junior can help Daddy pay the bills.

Neither a freezer nor refrigerator should fit into a tight niche. Air must circulate around either to remove heat from the condenser.
