Local Scouts Return From Trip to Annual Jamboree

(Editor's note: The following letter was written for the Mail Tribune by Stan Dowson, one of 63 Crater Lake area Boy Scouts who attended the annual Boy Scout Jamboree at Valley Forge.)

I'm sorry I have not written sooner but I could not because I and everybody else has been sick. Monday we arrived in Detroit and immediately began a thrilling tour.

First we visited Greenfield Village where the past is shown up through old homes, laboratories and experiments. After this we visited the Ford plant where we saw cars fully constructed in 70 minutes. Then we visited the steel processing plant where we saw steel made from lumps to processed needs, like frame parts and such in a matter of minutes.

Last but not least we saw the Ford Rotunda which showed Ford's Mercurys and Lincolns of today and tomorrow. There also was a chance to ride with a test driver.

I am sorry I have not written more often but the same routine has been continued every day, swapping, eating and campfires in the evening. On Monday the bobcat patrol, Bruce Bray, patrol leader, entered the loggers field day and won second in this event with 200 points out of a possible 240 points.

Thursday was the final day at the encampment and the grand closing was fascinating. We saw drill teams, drum and bugle corps, and an amazing group from Oklahoma which did unusual stunts. The most unusual was when a four-foot, six-inch boy cracked a 21-inch whip that could cut paper into confetti. Near the end, 52,000 boys lit up candles and appeared a beautiful sight. We also saw Eddie

School Officials Return from Portland

County School Superintendent Alf B. Mekvold and Bruce Hitt, county school supervisor, have returned from a meeting of the County School Superintendents' association at Portland State college.

The meeting was concerned with county school superintendents and assistants making a critical study of the curriculum now being offered in Oregon schools. According to Mekvold, the superintendents wanted to know if revisions or additions should be made so as to fit the students for a world which is rapidly turning to automation and electronics. Mekvold stated the whole program was geared to a study of automation and the electronic age and focused on youth and their needs for living in today's mechanized and scientific world.

Mekvold and Hitt also were a part of a group that took educational tours through KGW-TV's studio where they watched the broadcasting of the great books discussion.

Mekvold presided at a general session on "Visioning and Automation."

The conference was sponsored by the Oregon Association of County School Superintendents, a department of the Oregon Education association.

Travellers May See Ghosts of Towns

Bloomington, Ill.—Drive carefully when you travel through the central Illinois counties west of here, and perhaps you can see the ghosts of dozens of towns that might have been.

The country is rich farmland today. But corn rows and soybean fields cover what once were main streets of Bloomington, Eminence, Versailles or Bowling Green. Some of the towns laid out in the boom of the 1830s actually existed. Others didn't get beyond the plat stage.

More than two dozen now non-existent prairie cities were founded or planned in the land boom of the early 19th Century in Woodford, Tazewell and Logan Counties. Fewer than a dozen platted at the same time have managed to survive.

Researchers have difficulty finding out how many communities once were planned in the area. Some of the old plats have been destroyed. But many of the old plats survive in dusty files—names such as New Castle, Georgetown, London, Albany, Louisville, Hudson and Montpelier.

A few sites of the old towns are marked on the prairies with a stone, inscribed with the name of the city that might have been. Most of the would-be communities have entirely vanished.

The boom developed as settlers pushed westward in the early 1800's, and land promoters outran the development which was to come. The bottom dropped out of the boom in 1837.

Some of the communities did survive. Old Hanover became Metamora. Three others, Middleton, Mount Pulaski and Post-

ASSASSINATED—President Carlos Castillo Armas of Guatemala (above) was assassinated at the Presidential Palace in Guatemala City. His slayer, who committed suicide, was a palace guard and found to be a Communist. President Armas was the first to set back the Red infiltration in Central America.
