Radford Urges Strong Retaliatory Force

Norfolk, Va.—Adm. Arthur W. Radford urged Saturday that America keep its retaliatory striking force so powerful that no enemy can destroy it at the start of a war.

In his valedictory as a military man and as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Radford said the circumstances of history and modern war have forced the United States to adopt a "national policy" of relying on retaliatory military strength to prevent or win a war.

If that strength is to be meaningful, he said, "it must be adequate, it must be ready for immediate application and it must be able to avoid being neutralized by enemy action at the outset of general emergency."

Small Boy Found On Yosemite Cliff

Yosemite, Calif.—A smallboy was found by Rangers Saturday on a sheer Yosemite National park cliff where he had been stranded overnight.

Rangers radioed park headquarters the youngster was safe and in good physical condition. He was to be brought to Yosemite Valley later Saturday.

The boy is Terry Bivens, 6, of Portland, Ore. He became separated from his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bivens, late Friday while in a hiking party en route to the valley on the Yosemite Falls trail.

Rangers said Terry was found by rock climbers about one half mile from Columbia Point about one thousand feet above the valley floor. He had worked his way down the trail to a point where it started upward, but decided against the climb and ascended off the trail to a rocky ledge where he became trapped.

His disappearance was reported by his parents Friday night when the party reached the valley. Bivens had believed Terry was hiking with his mother and she thought the boy was with his father.

The Bivens family had started on the hike from Tioga road at the Yosemite Creek crossing. They arrived in the park earlier in the week and had been staying at Camp 11.
