The Child With a Physical Defect

As Dr. Robert H. Ivy, of Philadelphia, recently told the American Association of Plastic Surgeons, eight babies in every 1,000 are born with some physical defect. Among the five most common defects, in order of occurrence, are club feet, cleft lip or palate, an extra finger, a spina bifida (a small tumor on the lower part of the spine due to a defect in the uniting of the two halves of the spine), and hypospadias (a cleft-like defect in the construction of the penis).

Parents should remember that today club feet can generally be straightened out pretty well. A cleft lip or palate can be repaired. A superfluous finger can be removed, and a hypospadias can usually be repaired. The spina bifida can sometimes be helped. In addition to these congenital defects, there are several types of congenital defect in the heart; there are the defects due to a failure of the brain to develop properly, there are big birth marks, and there are ruptures of several types.

When a child has one abnormality he is very likely to have several. About one in five of the children with a bad congenital anomaly will die within the first year. Sometimes, although this is hard to accept, the parents agree that it is a blessing.

Transplanting Skin
Many a child who was badly burned should have skin grafted onto him. Even if skin taken from his mother does not survive more than a month or so, it may tide him over and save his life. For years experts in this field have been carrying out researches hoping to find some way in which the child or the person who gives the skin can be treated so that the child's body will not soon reject the transplant. Now, Dr. Lyndon A. Peer reports that grafts from a mother to a child sometimes will stay for several months. This is not true of grafts taken from the father.

Much work is being done, transplanting skin from one animal to another, and from these experiments much that is helpful is being learned.

Galena, Kan.—Someone stole an outboard motor off Gates Harrell's $340 boat last week. Apparently the same thief remembered he needed something to put it on. So he stole the boat Thursday night.

Siskiyou Band Camp In Last Week at SOC

Ashland—The first annual Siskiyou band camp is in its final week on the campus of Southern Oregon college according to Glenn T. Matthews founder and coordinator of the camp.

Director of the band is Clarence Sawhill, nationally-known conductor, clinician and adjudicator, who has already served as camp clinician at a number of camps this summer including the national music camp at Interlochen, Mich. Sawhill is director of bands at UCLA.

Matthews explained that the camp was open to both students and teachers and that many of the participants had come from as far away as Ritzville, Wash., and Livermore, Calif.

A century ago American sheep yielded an average of only two pounds of fleece. Now the average is eight pounds.
