New Top Hats For Beef Steaks

Best beef buy next to hamburger is stewing beef which has all the good nourishment of choice steak cuts. Here are handsome ways of dressing up first day stew or stews made from leftover roast. Six hungry people will relish five cups of stew placed in a six-cup casserole and covered with any of these:

Top casserole of stew with favorite pie crust using only one cup flour. Bake as usual in 425-degree oven. Stick in spray of parsley on way to table.

Make two cups fluffy mashed potatoes and spread over casserole. Bake in moderate oven, 375 degrees until delicately browned. Maybe some canned pimiento flecks in the potatoes? Mix a corn bread batter using either a package of corn meal mix or 1 1/2 cups your favorite corn bread batter. Pour over stew in casserole. Bake 25 minutes in 425-degree oven.

Baking powder biscuits, cut in one-inch rounds, squares or diamonds make an interesting topping for a stew. Arrange and bake as usual in 450-degree oven.

Dumplings always are hailed with pleasure. Make dumplings according to favorite recipe. Drop from spoon into the simmering stew. Obviously this requires a pan, not a casserole. Cover and cook 12 to 15 minutes without lifting lid. No lifting is secret of making tender, fluffy dumplings. Vary dumpling by substituting tomato juice for usual milk.

Speedy Frank Meals

Looking for quick meal ideas to give you more outdoors time? Frankfurters are handy helper.

Main Dishes. Add frank cuts in chunks to baked beans or Spanish rice. Slice franks and add to scalloped corn or potatoes or to macaroni and cheese; bake as usual. Add to saurkraut.

Franks in Sauces. Heat frankfurters; slice them, cut in chunks, halve slantwise or leave whole. Serve in mustard, sour cream or barbecue sauce. Or cooked noodles or rice.

Frank Sandwiches. Heat franks in water or brown in a little hot fat. Serve in hot dog buns and top with pickle relish, cole slaw, barbecue sauce or a mustard onion sauce made by combining chopped onions with prepared mustard. Or set out the makings and let each combine his own.

No Excuse for Listless Lettuce

Do you have listless lettuce in your refrigerator? No excuse for it, really. Lettuce, queen of the salad bowl is always on hand. Lettuce has been enjoyed for centuries, being noted in writings of Persia and Greece during the 5th and 6th centuries. Still, there are people who do not care for it properly and those are the ones we're about to talk to.

Lettuce keeps best if stored in the refrigerator. You may either wash lettuce before you put it away or just before you use it. Remove any bruised or rusty outer leaves before storing.

Do not soak lettuce. Just rinse it under running water. Don't remove the core before storing. Lettuce keeps better if you allow the water to drain off or pat it dry before storing.

Store lettuce in the refrigerator in a covered container or a plastic bag, foil, transparent film or waxed paper.

Remove the core when you're ready to use the lettuce. If it's lettuce cups you want, hold the cored side of the lettuce up under running water to loosen the leaves. Slip leaves off and drain before using. If you want lettuce wedges, cut washed, chilled, cored heads of lettuce into quarters just before serving. Personally, we break it for bite-size; never cut it with knife.

Squash Needs Zip. Give an extra zip to the delicate flavor of summer and Zucchini squashes with the addition of grated Parmesan cheese or a good dash of catsup just before serving. You know that you never peel the soft squashes?

Vegetable Combo. Combine two cups coarsely shredded cabbage, one cup chopped celery, one cup sliced carrots, one-half cup finely cut onion, one teaspoon salt, one-half tablespoon sugar, two tablespoons salad oil. Add one cup boiling water. Cover and cook until crisp-tender, 12 to 15 minutes. Makes four adequate servings.

Pacific Coast Supplies Nation With Many Fruits and Vegetables

By truck, rail, boat and plane, west coast produce is speeded to all parts of our country and to many other parts of the world. Consider those new season Gravenstein apples. Practically all the Gravensteins grown commercially are grown right here; close to 3 million bushels and half of them are fast-shipped out. Pears are grown in all sections of the country but California, Oregon and Washington produce close to 90 per cent of all sold commercially.

California and Arizona are much the biggest producers of cantaloups. Avocado production in this country is limited to California and Florida with California growing about 75 per cent of the domestic crop. California produces virtually all the lemons grown in North America. California grows half the country's peach crop. Principal apricot growing states are California, Washington, Utah and Oregon. California produces 95 per cent of all domestic grapes.

This goes on and on but let us look at lettuce before listing this week's best buys. Lettuce is grown commercially in 22 states but the California-Arizona area is responsible for well over 80 per cent of the total.

All of which means that we get the freshest, finest produce, quickly transported and handsomely displayed at very reasonable cost, thanks to our fair weather and sunny skies coupled with ingenuity, resourcefulness, hard work and investment of western growers.

Fruit Buys. Gravenstein apples for pie making and sauce; lemons for lemonades and giving zest to innumerable dishes; peaches, pears, plums for eating now and putting-up for later; cantaloups and watermelons for cool eating. Grapes, oranges, bananas.

Meat and Poultry. Beef cuts for braising and stewing; ground beef for burgers and meat loaves, spaghetti sauces and meat balls. Mature veal and most lamb cuts are reasonable with lamb for stewing and breast of veal at bargain levels. Pork is higher, spareribs reasonable. Turkeys and chickens are genuine bargains. Good cold as well as fresh from oven or pan.

Other plentiful include all dairy products, excellent variety in fish and shellfish.
