Elder, Wife Honored By Friends

Elder and Mrs. Byron Schaffner of Santa Cruz, Calif., were visitors at the Robert Meilike home in Medford this week. While here they were honored at a supper in the Rogue River academy park given by friends and former students.

Elder and Mrs. Schaffner spent five years, from 1934 to 1939, at Columbia academy, a Seventh-day Adventist school near Battle Ground, Wash., where he taught Bible classes in the academy and she was a member of the grade school faculty. They were surprised Wednesday night to find that friends and students with whom they had become acquainted during those years, now living in Medford and vicinity, number 75 with their families. Although several of the families were unable to attend, about 50 persons were present at the park Wednesday night.

As friendships were renewed, Elder Schaffner recalled officiating at the baptismal rites of some of those present, and also performing the wedding ceremonies of several of the families there. The Schaffners were interested in trying to match youngsters they had never seen with parents, and were happy to learn that all those present were attending one of the Valley's Seventh-day Adventist churches.

Elder and Mrs. Schaffner, who plan to retire next year, have spent 40 years in denominational work, including mission service in Africa. At present they are on the faculty of Sequel Junior academy near Santa Cruz.
