

Dance Concert Planned Today At Ashland Festival Theater

Ashland—Continuing its expanded dance program for 1957, the Oregon Shakespearean festival announces a special dance concert today at the Festival theater in Ashland, starting at 8 p.m. Pre-classic dance forms, similar to those that were popular in Elizabethan England, will be presented under the direction of Marcia Thayer, festival choreographer. The dancers, all members of the 1957 company, will be in costume.

Numbers will include several ancient country dances seen for centuries in English villages. The remainder of the program will highlight original choreography by Mrs. Thayer, who also will narrate the performance. Music is to be provided by W. Bernard Windt, festival music director, and will include accompaniments by tabor and chant, recorders, the lute, and the cello. A Bach suite for cello is the basis for one of the selections.

Included in the program will be court dances in a mood of splendor, such as the well-known pavane and minuet; lively dances like the gigue; and more unusual dances, such as the bourree which supposedly was danced by peasants in the vineyards of France; and the exciting la volta in which the lady is thrown high into the air by her partner.

This dance concert provides audiences with an opportunity to see dances that are seldom performed today, but are the basis for the ballet, folk, and square dancing of our age.

This season's production schedule offers dancing in all of the plays, plus performances by the dancers-on-the-green prior to play time.

Mrs. Thayer studied pre-classic dance forms under Eleanor Lauer and Marian Van Tuyl at Mills college.

Admission for the event is 50 cents.
