

Graham Calls for Congress Action

New York—Billy Graham Wednesday night called on President Eisenhower to take extraordinary steps to "warn the American people of the dangers of moral decadence."

He said that before Congress adjourns, "they should pass a unanimous resolution, calling upon the American people to repent of sin and turn to God."

The evangelist made these recommendations in a commentary on "what is taking place in a Los Angeles courtroom," the Confidential magazine scandal trial. He did not mention the magazine by name.

He said that one factor about the trial that disturbed him was "that our laws are so lenient as to allow the scandal magazines . . . to be sold in almost every part of the United States."

"This is carrying freedom of the press too far," he told an audience of 16,000 in Madison Square Garden. "Our young people are being offered a diet of unbelievable dirt and filth. No wonder our morals are at an all time low! No wonder our teenagers are on a rampage this summer!"

Movie Producer's Ranch Home Is Scene Of Western Style Capture of Desperado

Healdsburg, Calif. — A movie producer's ranch house was the scene Wednesday of a western style capture of a hold-up man complete with posse, gunplay and a knockdown, drag-out fight.

Principals in the rangeland drama were mariner-rancher Arthur Haden, 59, who led the posse, William Englehardt, 21, the gun-toting desperado, and six persons he held hostage for five hours on the ranch owned by producer Jack H. Skirball. Skirball was absent from the 8,900-acre sheep ranch 20 miles west of here.

Sonoma County Undersheriff Andrew Johansen said Haden and Englehardt were wounded in the brief gunfight and scuffle which resulted in the gunman's capture.

According to sheriff's officers Englehardt, object of a county-wide search after he held up a gas station Monday night, had holed up in the barn on Skirball's ranch. He was discovered Wednesday morning by the 8-year-old son of the ranch foreman, Harold Black.

Englehardt, brandishing a .45 caliber automatic, herded the boy, Mr. and Mrs. Black, house guests Mr. and Mrs. Harold Thompson of Eureka, Calif., and John Thompson, 69, a retired postmaster, into the house.

He ordered the women to prepare him breakfast. After wolfing down 10 eggs and more than a pound of liver the youth warned his hostages: "Don't any of you try to get help or you will be killed!" Undersheriff Johansen said

Englehardt, a reform school parolee, permitted the men to leave the house long enough to see to the chores, but he held the women under close guard.

Unknown to Englehardt, a hired hand, Arthur Stevens, was on the ranch. Black ordered Stevens to go for help.

Stevens alerted neighbors who surrounded the house, led by Haden, a merchant marine officer turned rancher, burst in to make the capture.

Black told sheriff's officers Haden, armed with a .22 caliber rifle, got the drop on Englehardt and ordered him to surrender. The youth refused, shots were exchanged and Haden fell with a bullet in his leg.

The ranch foreman leaped on the holdup man, and aided by others, succeeded in subduing Englehardt in a brawl which raged through the living room and kitchen.

Englehardt was slashed in the shoulder with a knife during the fight, but the wound was not serious.
