Three Plan to Attend Fair

By HELEN BOTTEL

Cave Junction — Three girls from the valley will represent the Illinois Valley Dairy club and the I. V. Stitches at the State fair.

They are Roberta and Norma Martin and Sharon Prather who will appear in several contests.

Norma and Roberta are to give a demonstration on how to make a rope halter. Roberta also will serve on the county dairy judging team, having won first at the county fair.

Sharon Prather is to substitute on the dairy judging team, as second, third and fourth place winners are unable to attend.

Stan Love, president of the Illinois Valley high school student body, returned Friday night from Eugene where he attended the Oregon Student Council workshop at Oregon state college.

More than 180 Shriners, families and friends, attended the Shriners picnic Sunday at Grayback Recreation area.

Among those who attended from the valley were Mr. and Mrs. Homer Snider, Mr. and Mrs. Jiggs Morris, Mrs. Arthur Kellert, and former residents, Mr. and Mrs. George Mulvey and Mr. and Mrs. Claude Masters, now of Grants Pass. Homer Snider served on the wood committee.

Guests at the Homer Snider home at Lone Mountain valley for the past two weeks have been Pamela and Judy Holzhauser, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Romie Holzhauser of Philo, Calif.

New Model Jet Plane Being Used by Russians

Moscow — A new model twin-engine jet transport TU-104A has been put into regular service between Moscow and Irkutsk, it was announced Friday.

The new version of the airliner seats 70 passengers instead of the 50 carried by the old model, but maintains the same 500 m.p.m. cruising speed. The new model presumably will be used on the Moscow Copenhagen route when regular Soviet jet service starts between the cities in October.

Three Medford Youths Attend YMCA Camp

Three Medford young people have been selected by the Young Men's Christian association to attend the YMCA annual Hi-Y and Tri Hi-Y officer training conference at Silver creek camp near Salem.

Leaving today for the camp are Jim Johnston, Miss Janice Cot and Miss Carolyn Carr. Advisor Herb Partridge, youth work secretary, will accompany them.

The Medford delegates will meet with about 170 others from throughout the northwest during the week of conference activities. They will study basic principles, methods and objects of Hi-Y and Tri Hi-Y clubs.

The clubs are sponsored by the YMCA and are composed of high school students. Medford's delegation will help organize and administer the local clubs upon their return. New clubs are being planned for the fall, and any high school boy or girl interested is asked to call the YMCA, SPring 2-6295.

JEEP FROM THE SKY Munich, Germany—The U.S. Air Force today apologized Saturday because one of its jeeps fell out of the sky. The jeep, dropped by parachute out of a transport plane during flight exercises, plopped into the back yard of an apartment house after the 'chute failed to open.

Is That So?

An elephant may have a life expectancy of 75 years; a dog of 18; a mouse of three; a jack-rabbit of nine. Why the difference in life-spans?

One clue perhaps is the heartbeat itself. And just as great as the differences in life-spans, so too is the difference in animals' heartbeats which propel the blood with its nourishing-materials into the arteries.

A whale may ker-thump along leisurely at 15 beats to the minute; a frog's around 20; blooded ones. A frog's for example, thumps along at a leisurely 20 per minute, while that of a mouse beats from 500 to 1000 times.

So the frog lives to a ripe old age while the tiny mouse is worn out before it reaches an age of three.

an elephant's, 25 or so; a rabbit's 210; while the pulse of songbirds, bats and mice may exceed 1,000 per minute!

Close Average Yet despite the vast differences in rate, the lifetime totals of heartbeats for each of these animals hits a fairly close average.

As to be expected, animals which lead a very active life and are capable of feats of endurance have large hearts, proportionately speaking. A deer, badger, wolf, or weasel has a heart about 1/100th of its weight.

In contrast a secretive rodent's is only about 1/250th of its weight. Also, a jack rabbit's heart is almost three times as big as that of a sedentary domestic rabbit of just about the same weight.

Many factors speed up heartbeat. When with young, a female deer heart must take care of not only her own needs but those of the unborn young within her—as a result, her heart must increase its output about one-half more than the normal amount.

When a jack rabbit races for its life, its heart may speed up and pump four times as much as while resting. After eating a big meal, the heart aids in quickly digesting the food by stepping up the circulation by almost one-third.

The heart of warm-blooded animals work at a far greater pace than the heart of cold-
