Cotton Leotards Youthful Fashion

The ballerina look will be popular in sportswear this fall for school-age young ladies, reports the National Cotton council.

Cotton leotards, traditional practice costume of ballerinas, have invaded the sportswear picture and proved many creative costume combinations for leisure hours.

Leotards in black or red will be worn beneath shorts or skirts. Alone they will make a figure-fitting variation on the at-home trouser theme.

Some back-to-schoolers will choose cotton corduroy Bermuda shorts to slip on over their slim leotards. Others will prefer short or knee-length pleated skirts of cotton knit.

Other skirt styles that adapt naturally to the leotards look are full, circular skirts of brightly colored velveteen and wrap-arounds of woven plaids.

Cotton leotards are available in either two-piece sets, consisting of tights and T-shirts, or one-piece, over-all styles. For the one-piece style a smart combination is Bermuda shorts topped with a cotton shirt opened at the neck.

When just the tights are worn beneath the skirts or shorts, they are ensembled with bulky cotton knit sweaters, drawing blouses or sissy shirts. Solid colors, stripes and many patterns are available in these cover-ups.

Culture of Iris Topic for Session Of Garden Club

Rogue River — Mrs. F. W. Shontz gave an informative talk on iris at the last meeting of Rogue River Garden club, held at the home of Mrs. Henry L. Bonney. She stated that August is the month to divide iris, advising that the leaves should be cut off in fan shape after separating the rhizomes with a sharp knife.

Bone meal and superphosphate should be placed in the ground before planting the rhizomes, which should not be completely covered. In early spring, Mrs. Shontz said the plantings should be treated with a solution of one cup of ammonia to three gallons of water. This kills plant diseases.

It was also said that peonies should be cut back at this time and that the gardener should use caution in covering with wood ashes, since these tend to crust over. Coleus may be cut now to start new plants, and they will root in water. The speaker also said that to start roses, cut off growth with some old wood, and place it in a white potato for sprouting. Azaleas, camellias and rhododendrons should be fertilized at this time of the year.

The club set April as the month for the 11th annual flower show of the club.

Mrs. E. W. Shock presented the club with a green ribbon won at the Josephine county fair for an exhibit entered by Mrs. Shock and Mrs. Harry Condray for the club.

Mrs. Shock displayed dahlias, Mrs. Harold Dunham and Mrs. Paul Hughes brought several varieties of roses. Mrs. H. Hanley displayed everlasting flowers, and Mrs. K. Burkhardt a dry arrangement of weeds with bells of Ireland which had been treated in a solution of glycerin. Mrs. John Bæeding displayed a Majilji poppy and an arrangement of money plant. Mrs. Dunham also displayed a various colored gladiolus.

Mrs. Dunham presided, and reported on the annual convention of the Oregon Federation of Garden clubs held earlier this summer in Coos Bay.

Guests present were Mrs. R. P. Ellingson, Klamath Falls; Mrs. Herbert Rasmussen, Bend; Mrs. A. W. Patterson and Miss Carolyn Condray, both of East Evans Creek road.

Next meeting of the club will be at the home of Mrs. Earl Miller on the river.

Prosecution Seeks To Link Tattlers To Confidential Magazine Stories

By VERNON SCOTT United Press Hollywood Reporter

Hollywood — A stack of photostated checks two feet high was used by the prosecution today to link more show business tattlers to Confidential magazine's stories in an attempt to prove charges of criminal libel and conspiracy to print obscenity against the publication.

Deputy District Attorney William Ritzi halted the pile of evidence into court in the fourth week of the racy trial to confront defendant Fred Meade, operator with his wife of a Hollywood scandal collecting agency.

Named as informants in Mead's testimony under cross-examination by Ritzi were: 1. Ralph Cercy, whom Meade testified was a Texas radio station executive he met in Dallas and who was paid $2,300 for arranging for "a tremendous amount of confirmation" of scandal stories printed in Confidential. Cercy's name was mentioned after Judge Herbert V. Walker overruled a loud objection from defense counsel Arthur Crowley that "three people already have lost their jobs as a result of this type of testimony." Cercy's station was not named. One of the many stories was about singer

Elvis Presley. Check To Ex-Wife

2. Mitchell Lewis identified as a disc jockey and public relations man who Meade said was "involved" in the Presley story from Texas. Lewis was paid $200.

3. Helen Berger, identified as the ex-wife of Robert Tuton, the former bartender and maître d' whom Mead testified last week had an "affair" with actress Joan Crawford and told Confidential all about it for a price. Meade could not recall on the stand why he sent a check for $200 to Miss Berger.

4. Robert Drummond, a Los Angeles police officer and roommate of private eye Fred Otash, the investigator for Confidential magazine. He was given a $100 check, Meade testified, to "buy a Christmas present" for Otash.

5. George Shaw, identified as "furnished a very amusing story about Joan Crawford's good deed." Shaw got a check for $100.

6. Bruce Jones, whom Meade testified was a public relations man who was paid $500 for a story on one of his clients — "an actress unidentified who wanted publicity by getting a story in the magazine." Meantime, Crowley dared film celebrities to come to court and "swear" that the lurid tales about them in Confidential were untrue.

New York — Fred Otash, a private detective who does work for Confidential magazine, said Sunday night that any expose magazine is "junk."

"When I say 'junk' I mean that's what I think of the people who read them," Otash said on "The Mike Wallace Interview" TV show ABC.

"I personally don't read expose magazines," said the detective. He said he makes "maybe" $25,000 a year working for Hollywood Research, Inc.

Otash said movie stars "enjoy the items that are written about them." "The only time an expose article will hurt a movie star," he said, "is if he or she are sexual deviates."

He called paid informers who supply information for articles "kiss and tellers."

In another development, a London newspaper quoted model Pat Steele, 25, as saying she was prepared to testify that a story she sold to Confidential about movie producer John Huston was "a pack of lies." The newspaper, "The People," quoted Miss Steele as saying she "elaborated" on a story about Huston and his secretary because she was in need of money.

In New York, Michael Mordant-Smith, European correspondent for Confidential, said he had "documentary proof" that the Huston story is true. He said he had affidavits but declined to say who had signed them. He said he had been engaged to Miss Steele for a year when he broke the engagement several months ago and announced his engagement to another girl.

Air Force Secretary James H. Douglas is considering the proposal, but the final decision may be left to President Eisenhower.

Mitchell was an outspoken advocate of air power during the 1920s and demanded that Army and Navy air arms be abolished and a separate air force created. He was hailed before a court martial board and convicted of making statements against good order and military discipline.

New York — Actor Lawrence Tierney, who once played John Dillinger in a movie, was free on $500 bail today on a burglary charge.

Miss Keenan, expressing surprise that the charge was burglary, said: "I just want him to stay away from me. He didn't take anything."

New York — Negotiations resume today in an effort to head off a strike by some 23,000 telephone equipment installers across the country.
