By UNITED PRESS

Tokyo—Communist China's chief propaganda organ "People's Daily," on that country's rejection of a U.S. State department proposal to let 24 American newsmen go behind the Iron Curtain: "What the U.S. government is now trying to do is send people into our country to search our opportunities to create trouble."

Washington—Sen. J. William Fulbright (D-Ark.) on the state department's stand against admitting Red Chinese reporters to the United States on an exchange basis:

"Don't we have Tass reporters here now. I don't think the Chinese are any more dangerous than the Russians."

Washington—American counterespionage Boris Morros, disclosing that several Americans employed by the government overseas are spying for the Russians and may soon be indicted:

"There are two sisters, one married to the richest celluloid man in Europe and one married to an important engineer in Los Alamos."

Vatican City—Pope Pius XII, on the "cruel disillusionment" that young people face when they first go out into the world:

"We are also developing a political climate good for all people everywhere who want to see peace and justice and human welfare."

Washington—Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, on the solidarity of the United States and its European allies:

"We are also developing a political climate good for all people everywhere who want to see peace and justice and human welfare."

Owsley Impressed With Defense Motion

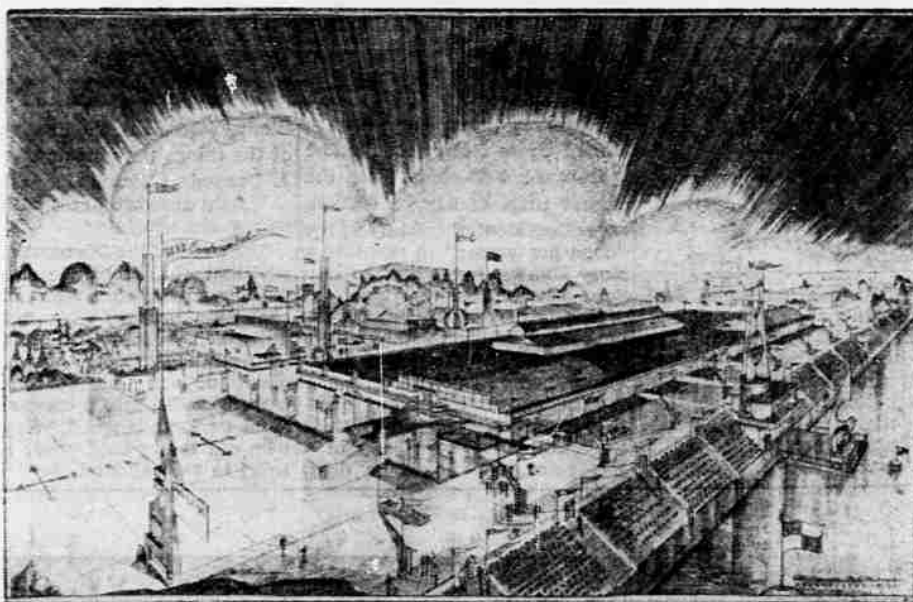

Maebashi, Japan—Col. Alvin L. Owsley, an American Legion observer at the trial of U.S. Army Specialist 3C William S. Girard of Ottawa, Ill., said today he was "particularly impressed" with the defense motion to deny Japanese jurisdiction in the case.

Owsley, a former soldier-diplomat and now a Dallas, Tex., lawyer, said the motion was firmer than the one presented early to the U.S. Supreme Court on a similar plea.

After viewing the opening trial session Owsley said the trial was "deliberate and calm." Owsley said he was "impressed with the defense, mainly because of the drive to clarify the indictment or to quash it."

IKE RETURNS

Washington — President Eisenhower returned to the White House Sunday afternoon after an overnight stay at his Gettysburg, Pa., farm. The President arrived by car in a heavy rain. He had flown to Gettysburg Saturday morning.

CENTENNIAL SCENE — An artist's sketch depicts a remodeled Pacific International Livestock exposition building and 54 surrounding acres for the Oregon Centennial Exposition and International Trade Fair of 1959. The governor's nine member centennial commission approved a two-year lease on the building recently. The structure covers 11 acres with 400,000 square feet of exhibit space for a coliseum type arena, seating 8,500. An adjacent aqua center area for boat races and water sports will seat 15,000.

Backstairs: Ike to Take Flu Shots

By MERRIMAN SMITH
United Press White House Writer
Washington — President Eisenhower will be inoculated today against Asian flu.

The White House said the President's doctor, Maj. Gen. Howard McC. Snyder, and Surgeon General Leroy E. Burney, had recommended that Eisenhower take the shot.

Burney said last week that persons with histories of heart and pulmonary ailments should receive priority as soon as the vaccine was available.

Eisenhower suffered a heart attack in 1955. Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said that in view of that, the President would receive the vaccine today.

Eisenhower already has been exposed to what the doctors have diagnosed clinically as Asian flu. His chief economic adviser, Dr. Gabriel Hague, came down with the flu last Thursday, less than 24 hours after a conference with the President.

Sgt. Jack Cliff, attached to the White House garage and a driver of official vehicles, also is suffering from the ailment but has not been in recent close contact with the chief executive.

Tom Craven Jr., a cameraman for Columbia Broadcasting System news film, was working in the President's office several times early last week before he came down with the new ailment.

The President told his news conference last Wednesday he would not take the vaccine until it was available generally to the public. But he changed his mind, according to Hagerty, on the recommendations of Snyder and Burney and their assurance that sufficient vaccine is available in the Washington area for persons with heart and chest conditions.

The President had caused some concern by his statement of last week that he would wait for some time to take a flu shot: "I am going to take it just as soon as ordinary people like I am can get it. Now, that is when I will take it."

"Ordinary people," meaning the general public, probably won't have access to the vaccine in any appreciable volume until the middle or latter part of September. At least one medical expert believes that it would be foolhardy to wait that long to administer the vaccine to the commander in chief of the armed forces of the United States.

"Heavens knows," said one doctor, "by the wildest stretch of democracy and modesty, the President of the United States should be protected against the new flu ahead of an Army captain."

Electrical Union Opens Convention

San Francisco—The United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers union, ousted from the CIO on charges it was Communist dominated, opened its 22nd annual convention today on a note of optimism.

"We've hit our low point and we've started to climb back up," Union President A. J. Fitzgerald said.

"We're starting to take back some of the locals that either jumped out under attack or were raided by other unions."

High point of the left-wing UE's five-day convention program will be an address Thursday by longshoreman leader Harry Bridges. A spokesman said Bridges and longshore union secretary Louis Goldblatt were invited to speak to the 200 UE delegates because their union is also "independent."

Union officials estimated the UE membership today between 150,000 and 200,000.

"And we're gaining every day," organization director James J. Matles reported. At the time of the union's expulsion in 1949 its membership reached 326,000.

The year 1958 will mark the fiftieth anniversary of the creation of the Federal Bureau of Investigation by Attorney General C. J. Bonaparte.
