Peter Freuchen, Arctic Explorer, Dies in Alaska

New York—Peter Freuchen, 71, Arctic explorer, author and TV quiz show champion, died of a heart attack Monday at the Elmendorf Air Force Base, Anchorage, Alaska.

Commentator Lowell Thomas informed his office here today that Freuchen collapsed and died after carrying his luggage up a stairway at the base's officers quarters. The grizzled, one-legged explorer had refused any help, Thomas said.

Thomas reported that a Navy doctor was at the scene and pronounced Freuchen dead immediately after he collapsed.

'Sentimental Journey'
Freuchen was in Anchorage on a "sentimental journey" to the Arctic with other veteran explorers including Bernt Badchen, Sir Hubert Wilkins, and Adm. Donald B. MacMillan. The expedition was planned in connection with the International Geophysical Year and will be filmed by Thomas for his new TV show.

Freuchen's rugged bearded face became familiar to millions of Americans when he made six appearances on CBS' "$64,000 Question" show last year to win the quiz's top prize in the category of "The Seven Seas." He later won $16,000 more on the "$64,000 Challenge" when his challenger, a merchant marine captain, failed to answer a question.
