Today's Tots Pampered Lot; Carriage Robes of Costly Fur

By GAY PAULEY
United Press Women's Editor
New York — Today's tots are the healthiest, the most abundant, and also the most pampered in history.

The parental and grand-parental lullaby seems to be: Nothing but the best for baby. Sculptors design furniture for the nursery. Name designers create their clothes. Furriers wrap them in mink. Even the diaper has taken on a couture look.

Statistically, the Institute of Life Insurance reports, babies born today are in the pink of health. Infant mortality is less than 30 per 1,000 births, pretty low when compared with 1900. Then there were 160 deaths in the first year for every 1,000 births.

The birth rate is at an all-time high... in 1956, 4,200,000 babies arrived; in 1940, the number was 2,560,000.

Startling Toy Sales
Supplying this bumper crop with the basics is big business of course. But the people adding the high style touch aren't doing badly either.

Teddy bears at $50 per, help push toy sales for the one to five group to nearly $93 million annually.

Baby Talk magazine located one firm selling mink booties at $15 a pair; a furniture manufacturer featuring a miniature chaise longue for the nursery; and an importer selling baby carriages, styled like an English coach with windows on either side.

Knoll Furniture features nursery chairs designed by Harry Bertola and tables by Isamu Noguchi, both sculptors. A nursery of the future, which will be displayed at the National Home Furnishings Show, New York, September 12-22, will include an aluminum and nylon crib suspended from the ceiling. Designed to sway the baby gently, the crib has fluorescent tubes attached to its underside, for night lighting without glare.

Pastel Diapers
Look what's happened to diapers. First the pastels replaced the whites. Now Kendall Mills, of Walpole, Mass., sells matching diaper and crib sheet sets printed with puppy dogs or rosebuds.

Sacks Fifth Avenue, whose baby shop helped outfit Princess Caroline of Monaco, does a big business in organza pillow cases for $8.95 a pair, and a luxury comforter at $48.50.

Even fancier trappings are available from Maximilian or Ritter Bros., both furriers. Ritter will make on order carriage covers in broadtail, beaver, squirrel or mink, priced at $150 to $1,000. Maximilian makes the covers in white mink for $2,500, a throw (pun intended), or in white ermine for $2,000.

Baby can have christening caps in beaded and embroidered silk, pink or blue, from John Fredericks. Mr. Fred, boss of the firm, often sends them as gifts to his famous customers. Margaret Truman Daniels and Grace Kelly Grimaldi each received one.
