

Director Urges Teaching Of Bicycle Safety Rules

By GAY PAULEY
United Press Women's Editor

New York — Bicycles and back-to-school go together like ABCs. But unfortunately, they also combine to increase the number of accidents to children.

Last year, 480 youngsters were killed and 35,000 injured in bicycle accidents, most of them in collisions with cars. The toll is on the increase for two reasons — more young people and more bikes. It is estimated there are 21 million children using the two-wheelers.

"Most of these accidents could be prevented, had we taught our children the basic rules of safe bicycling," said Monroe D. Schackner, director of safety education for Johnson and Johnson.

Schackner is founder and director of a bicycle safety program, which since its start last spring has been used in some 2,400 communities. It has the blessing of the National Safety Council and the Bicycle Institute of America.

Has Safety Kit
Safety should be taught at home and school," said Schackner, a bicycling enthusiast. He's put together a safety kit for schools — it's available for the asking, which includes a manual for teachers, student literature, written and riding tests, and a prize-winning color sound film called "Play It Safe."

Schackner said the kit grew out of his work with city leaders in White Plains, N. Y. They started a continuing safety campaign after 14 bike accidents in two weeks. The town now happily boasts that in two years it has had only one bike accident.

"When children return to school, the accident rate goes up," said Schackner. "The grade school kids are the most frequent victims. They are the least skilled riders... don't have the common sense of older children and will take unnecessary chances."

He compiled this list of 10 rules by which parents can help their children to safety.

—Make sure the bicycle is the right size for the child.

Need Good Brakes
—Give the bicycle a mechanical check, with special attention to brakes.

—If the youngster rides at night, provide him with a headlight bright enough to be seen at a distance of 500 feet, and with a red light or reflector at the rear, bright enough to be seen 300 feet.

—Teach the child to ride with both hands on the handlebars.

—Make sure he knows not to make a left turn in traffic.

—A child should never ride with another person on the bicycle. This weakens his control of the bike.

—He should use hand signals to indicate his intention to turn or stop.

—No stunt riding on the street.

—Teach him to look carefully for approaching vehicles when he rides into a street from driveway or alley.

—And equip the child's bike with a basket or carrier, so he won't be tempted to carry packages in his hands.

Wicker furniture can be kept from turning yellow by scrubbing it with a stiff brush moistened with warm salt water.

Love Main Reason Girls Marry Young

Knoxville, Tenn. — Love, it seems, is the main reason girls get married before finishing high school. And impatience.

Zona H. Kelly makes this report after conducting a four-year study of in-school marriages in a Tennessee city of 20,000 population.

Most girls, she says, were wed because they were "so much in love they couldn't wait."

Others had a less romantic reason: They wanted to get out of school.

Some just wanted to get away from home, where conditions were "unpleasant."

The reaction to marriage, Mrs.

Education Interim Committee To Meet

Salem — The legislative interim committee on education will meet here for the second time Saturday at 9:30 a.m., Sen. Donald R. Husband, Eugene, announced today.

Finance problems, district organization and possible legislation to clarify some of the laws passed at the regular 1957 session will be discussed.

Kelly reveals, ranged from "very happy" to just plain happy, with not one girl expressing regret.

And then there was this conclusion on the part of high school faculty mem'ers:

The young matrons do not have a bad influence on their classmates, but they cannot be considered an asset.

Bids Requested for Work at MacLaren

Salem — The State Board of Control has called for bids covering new construction and alterations at MacLaren school for boys near Woodburn.

The new construction will complete the fourth side of a quadrangle with a semi-security unit designed for 100 boys. Dining facilities and class room space will be provided.

Acting Superintendent Don Miller said the other three sides will be complete this fall and should be ready for occupancy in November. He said the fourth side should be finished next Spring. Bids on the latter project are due Sept. 24.
