

Quotes From the News

By UNITED PRESS

Houston, Tex.—Sen. Clinton P. Anderson, asking what is the key to peace in the atomic age:

"The answer might be to be certain the atom goes to work—not in arsenals and in guided missiles, but in the simple tasks of turning wheels, testing metals and probing the earth for its treasure of oil and minerals and in the tasks of medicine and agriculture."

Washington—Rep. Brooks Hays (D-Ark.) the man credited with bringing President Eisenhower and Arkansas Gov. Orval Faubus together to discuss the Little Rock school crisis:

"I have advised with the governor of course. And I have been transmitting information to the White House all along. I have only tried to be helpful. There are many others helping too."

Chicago—Sen. Hubert Humphrey (D-Minn.) saying there is little the United States can gain by showing anxiety in the Syrian situation:

"The United States is a big country and should respond to such crises with less emotion."

Washington—Israeli Ambassador Abba Eban, in saying that American arms shipments to the Middle East do not effectively strengthen security in the area:

"We definitely think that in the relationship between the Western powers and Middle Eastern states emphasis should be placed upon economic development and progress and not on accumulation of armaments."

United Nations, N.Y.—Cuban U.N. Ambassador Emilio Nunez-Portuondo, in saying the Hungarian revolt shattered the myth of a Communist paradise for workers:

"But something more was demonstrated. This was that it is not true that after the death of Stalin, the cruel and ferocious policy of the Moscow government had altered by one inch. It did not change one iota."

Fence Thief Given Time to Replace It

Fitchburg, Mass.—An admitted fence thief was given one week to replace the barrier or face the consequences.

Forteos H. Xarras, 34, of Leominster pleaded guilty to larceny of $25 worth of stones from the fence of Albert A. Hoisington.

Judge A. Z. Goodfellow continued the case with the proviso that Xarras rebuild the fence.

The Wisdom of the Man Who Faces Facts

I wish everyone in this country would join me in reading the first installment of Bernard Baruch's fascinating autobiography. I wish then that everyone would thrill, as I did, over his statement that if one is to succeed in this life, he must learn to base his decisions and actions on facts—all the facts he can get on a subject. Then he must face these facts, and act upon them and them alone. He must not let himself be influenced by prejudices, or by what he wishes or hopes is true. Only in this way did Mr. Baruch make his first million by the time he was 39.

As he says, he has seen many prominent men lose out time and again because they went against the facts, and believed what they wanted to believe. In 1901, Mr. Baruch made $700,000 by selling Amalgamated Copper short at a time when the facts were that the production of the red metal was exceeding the demand. Baruch knew that, under such circumstances, the stocks of copper-producing companies would have to come down. They could not keep going up as a group of wealthy speculators insisted they would. Because these speculators ignored the facts, they lost heavily.

When I get a scolding letter from someone about a column, he or she says, "I don't like what you said," or "I resent what you said," or "You had no right to say that," or "You've sold out to the aluminum trust or the AMA," or "You are an ignoramus." The fact that in my column I quoted from, let us say, a report of the National Research Council, or a committee of distinguished experts appointed by the British Government, does not influence my angry reader. What interests me is that rarely does anyone question my facts or try to show me wherein they are wrong. What amuses me is that, instead of sending his angry letter to the eminent men who gathered and published the facts, the fellow attacks me, missing the point that I am just reporting what was said. Often, while failing to note that I am acting merely as a passer-on of information, he accuses me bitterly of being too strongly in favor of something I wrote about, or of being viciously against him and his group.

The only feature of all this that worries me is that so many of us humans are not influenced by facts, but by our violent dislikes or by what we want to believe is true. And this is why so many of us get into terrible trouble in this world. Sometimes, because of this tendency, some of us lose all of our money, and some of us lose our life. What I wonder is, if our vaunted educational system ought to try to combat this method of thinking? Perhaps it could not change it because it is so fundamental. On Taking a Child To the Hospital

A recent study showed great need for more cooperation between physicians and hospitals in getting a child into a hospital bed without frightening him badly. The evidence shows that, first, the doctor should tell the parents more than he usually does as to why he wants the child in the hospital, and what he thinks is wrong. Is it some awful and hopeless disease? Will there be an operation? If the child becomes frightened, will he be comforted by the nurses,

Gromyko Accused Of 'Falsifications'

Washington—The United States has accused Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko of "falsifications" and "blustering" in charging that the U.S. is plotting intervention in Syria.

The State Department said Gromyko seemed to be "deliberately calculating to break those bridges of understanding which still sustain our hopes for peace."

The unusual personal attack on the Soviet foreign minister was prompted by statements he made in Moscow at a Tuesday news conference. In addition to his charges on Syria, Gromyko denounced American-allied policies on disarmament, and European, Middle Eastern and Far Eastern affairs.

Method of Exploding Bacteria Revealed

Detroit—A fast, simple method for exploding bacteria cells was revealed here recently by two research men of the University of California at Davis.

The new method will vastly simplify studies of the chemistry of cell walls and the compounds inside cells. Allen G. Marr, assistant professor of bacteriology, and graduate student Stanley A. Robrish told the Society of American Bacteriologists.

The cells are first placed in a concentrated solution of glycerol, or glycerin, which the cells soak up, Robrish said. Then the glycerol-laden bacteria are put in water and as the liquid rushes into the cells, they explode.

Newport Man's Body Found Along Highway

Newport, Ore.—The body of Franklin White Jr., 21, Newport, was found along Highway 101 just south of the Yaquina Bay bridge. Police said he apparently had been killed in a car accident at least 24 hours before.

The body was found by Elwin Hargus, 12, of South Beach who was picking up beverage bottles along the highway. He found White's demolished car and the body lying in front of it in a 15-foot ditch on the west side of the highway. State police said White apparently was killed instantly in the crash. He had

Scarce Wildlife Seen In Upper Peninsula

Lansing, Mich.—Reports of wildlife relatively scarce in Michigan generally have come from Chippewa county in the eastern portion of the Upper Peninsula.

A conservation officer reported a pair of timber wolves spotted in the county. He said he had observed wolves in the area on three other occasions in recent years. Limited numbers of timber wolves still roam the more remote areas of the peninsula.

Little girls beget big heartaches

From the moment they're born, girls are a lot of trouble. Little ones wiggle too much. Big ones shed too many tears. All of them want dresses that cost too much. And Mothers and Dads never stop worrying about them—never stop loving them—as they take each difficult step from babyhood to girlhood, from blue jeans to crinolines.

Is your little girl starting school this year? If so, she's taking her first step towards growing up—starting on her way towards high school, college, wedding bells and managing a home of her own. There's so much you want her to learn. So many things she needs to know to grow up into the kind of wife and mother you want her to be.

One of the important lessons for your daughter to learn is the meaning of thrift and the value of a regular savings program. And that's what the U. S.

Treasury's School Savings Program will teach her.

By the purchase of 10¢ and 25¢ Savings Stamps in their schools, children can save up for U. S. Savings Bonds of their very own. And, as you know, Savings Bonds are one of the best investments that any of us can make.

Is your child's school participating in this important program? Why not speak to your principal, school superintendent or P. T. A. group about it? And start the U. S. School Savings Program in your school today.

Your Savings Bonds State Director will gladly help you install a School Savings Plan or revitalize a present one. Phone or write him—or contact the Savings Bonds Division, U. S. Treasury Department, Washington 25, D. C.

U. S. Savings Stamps point the way you want your child to grow!
