Help Yourself to Happiness

This column is one of a series on marriage and family problems which appears weekly in this paper. It presents problems on everyday living and attempts to bring you the most expert opinion in this area.

Will You Be A Good Mate?

Should we marry? Are we suited to each other? Again and again we hear these questions at the American Institute of Family Relations.

Successful marriage depends primarily upon the personality of the partners. Just as like attracts like, so similar personalities adjust to each other most easily. You have often heard that long-married couples grow more like each other with the passing years.

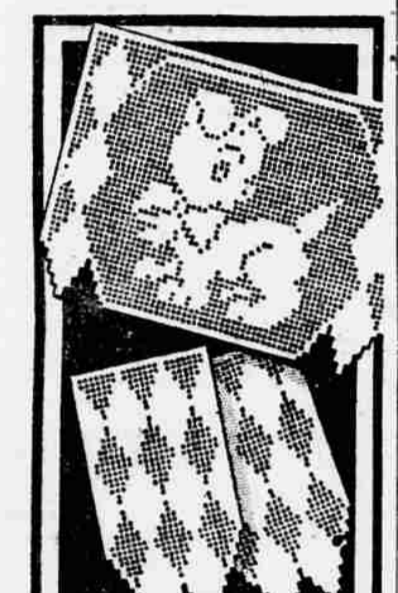

A demonstrative man is happy.

piet with a warm and openly affectionate wife. A staid and sober woman is most at ease with a reserved and dignified husband. Some people respond to their mates with greater intensity than others: both types can and do form happy marriages, but their happiness is in direct ratio to their similarity of temperament.

How responsible are you? Are you warm or reserved? This test will show you your responsiveness:

- 1. Do you have many friends? 2. Do you compliment others easily? 3. Do you find it easy to make new friends? 4. Do you belong to at least three clubs or church groups? 5. Were your parents affectionate? 6. Does music move you strongly? 7. Do you miss your friends when you don't see them often? 8. Do you become excited at a football game? 9. Do you talk over problems with your friends or invite their confidences? 10. Do you like children? 11. Do you dislike to see pain or blood? 12. Do you consider yourself genuinely affectionate or demonstrative with your beloved? 13. Do you consider yourself free of inhibitions? 14. Do you get over a hurt quickly? 15. Do you feel you are outgoing and natural with the opposite sex? 16. Do you think yourself well-adjusted sexually? 17. Do you feel affectionate toward your siblings? 18. Do you feel at ease with the aged or the ill? If you have answered YES to at least fifteen of these questions, you are a warm and responsive person. If you have answered YES to less than ten, you may be a reserved nature. Whether responsive or reserved, your best chances for successful marriage will lie with a person of similar temperament.

Capping Service Held for Students; Parents Attend

Miss Rosemarie Beltz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Beltz, 1119 Niantic street, and Miss Sandra Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Wilson, West Fourteenth street were among 31 nursing students to take part in a capping service held Thursday night, September 5 at Mount Tabor church in Portland.

Miss Beltz and Miss Wilson have completed their probationary period at the Portland Sanitarium and hospital, clinical division of the Walla Walla College School of Nursing, and have been accepted as members of the Class of '60, Section II.

The traditional service included the presentation of caps by Miss Ann Stratton, associate dean of the school of nursing, and a lamp-lighting ceremony. Each newly-capped nurse held a Florence Nightingale lamp, lighted by Miss Dorothy Nordahl, senior nurse, costumed as the "Lady of the Lamp," after which the class repeated the Florence Nightingale pledge.

Following their acceptance as a class, Elder E. E. Beltz presented a challenge to the group to high standards of service.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Beltz, and Mr. and Mrs. Wilson attended the ceremony, and their daughters returned to Medford with them for a short visit before resuming their studies in Portland.

A meeting of the council was also held Wednesday, September 11. Luncheon followed handicrafts and sewing.

Current project of the group is collection of articles to send to the J. W. Nilsens, missionaries to Africa. Mrs. Nilsen has provided the council with a list of articles difficult to procure in Africa, and the list has been posted in the foyer of the church, with a box for collections.

Those in charge are anxious to collect the articles by the end of the month in order that they will be received in time for Christmas.

She was greeted at the airport by her parents and a host of friends including 24-year-old John Swenson.

She returned to her home in Astoria to make ready to enter Willamette university next week.

Fire Conditions Worsen in State

By UNITED PRESS Fire conditions took a turn for the worse again today after the Thursday cool spell. Forecasters said temperatures would rise again today and predicted above normal temperatures for the next five days.

Despite the push of cool marine air inland Thursday, state foresters reported seven new fires but managed to control all of them within a few hours. Federal crews in eastern Oregon managed to control at least 16 incendiary fires on grazing lands in Malheur county.

Two fires were reported in the Medford area Thursday and four more in Douglas county. All were under 10 acres in size and were soon controlled. In Coos county, a 100-acre fire swept through logging slash at the head of Four Mile creek but was checked by firefighters.

The 16 fires in eastern Oregon burned a total of about one thousand acres before they were trawled.

Restrictions on logging along the Oregon coast were lifted Wednesday night and Thursday noon but it was too early to know whether returning hot weather would force another shutdown. Washington state authorities ordered new forest closures in Whatcom and Skagit counties as humidities dived again.

State police said an officer found Mrs. Moeller in her overturned car in a roadside ditch about a half-mile east of King's highway.

Officers said the woman apparently was traveling east on South Stage rd. when the car ran off the road, struck a power pole and rolled over in the ditch.

A passerby called state police from a nearby service station. Officers said the woman estimated the accident must have occurred about midnight. State police received the call and called Medford Ambulance service about 4:30 a.m.
