The Medical Roundup

by Walter Alvarez

Emeritus Consultant in Medicine, Mayo Clinic
Emeritus Professor of Medicine, Mayo Foundation

Many people ask, how can you tell when you have a tapeworm? The answer is that if you have any reason to fear you may have one, you should watch your stools. If you see in the toilet bowl little white segments that look like a slice off of a noodle; and if these things move a bit in the water, you will probably have a tapeworm. You can be sure of this when a whole string of these segments comes away, usually with a spell of diarrhea.

Dr Alvarez

Round worms sometimes come away in the stool, and on rare occasions they can be vomited. So far as I know, there are no definite symptoms of indigestion or abdominal discomfort by which the presence of worms can be recognized. Children are supposed to get nervous and irritable and jumpy. Children of Caucasians living in the tropics are usually "de-wormed" from time to time. Because the cysts of tapeworms are in the muscles of cattle and hogs the forms are likely to appear in the bowels of people who like to eat poorly cooked meat or pork. A rare tapeworm that can be gotten from some uncooked lake fishes produces a severe anemia.

Warts

According to a recent article, warts can be removed in any one of several ways. Today, there is a tendency to avoid the use of x-rays, especially in the cases of young people. The doctor can inject a drop of procaine under the wart and then destroy it with the hot sparks that come from a special machine. Some men inject a drop of a 5 per cent solution of sodium morrhuate into the base of the wart. Others first inject a local anesthetic and then excise the wart with a knife. They must be careful not to get a scar that will be tight. Others first apply a plaster of 40 per cent salicylic acid which softens the hard part of the wart. Then they apply a pencil of dry ice.

Warts on the bottom of the foot can be treated in these same ways. Some men claim that if one will just inject a few drops of procaine solution into the base of the wart it is likely later to drop off.

As all students of medical folklore know, most old people could tell us how to charm off warts. One of the commonest methods is to rub the warts with some bacon and then, at night, to bury the bacon at a cross-roads. Tom Sawyer and Huck Finn once experimented with this technic.

The Hollywood Scene

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press Writer

Hollywood— (UP) —Toughest of the western gunslingers blasting away on TV this season is Jim Garner, star of "Maverick," a brand new sagebrush saga.

Vernon Scott

What makes Garner any rougher than Wyatt Earp or Matt Dillon? The opposition, podnah!

Garner's hour-long show competes in the same slot with Jack Benny, Ed Sullivan and Steve Allen — as rugged a passel of sidewinders as ever rode the TV trail.

Not Backing Down

"If ever a guy was caught in a cross-fire, it's me," Garner says. "There are 32 Westerns on TV this year, and I had to tangle with those three characters. But I'm not backing down to 'em."

In true western style, underdog Garner figures he can "shup" the enemy if he gets an even draw.

"People are going to tune into 'Maverick' Sunday nights to see who's bucking those powerful programs," he explained during lunch. "And once they look in I think I can hold 'em.

"The first half-hour of the show is opposite Benny, on the last half we're up against Allen and Sullivan. No other program can make that statement. Come to think of it, who'd want to make it?"

Garner claims his offering is an "adult" horse opera based on a gambler who meanders around the wide-open spaces exposing crooked dealers and other cheats.

Can Handle Gun

"I make no claim to being the fastest gun in the West," he grinned, "but if I'm forced to unlimber my six-gun I can handle myself all right."

A 29-year-old all-American boy type, Garner stands 6 feet 3 inches tall and weighs 200 pounds. He was raised in Oklahoma and lays claim to being part Cherokee Indian.

"Almost everybody back home claims to be part Indian," he said.

Does he think his show can lick such formidable opposition?

"Well, 32 Westerns is too many," he confided. "And somebody's got to go. Maybe next year there'll only be seven or eight left. I think 'Maverick' will still be around when the others bite the dust."
