

The "Teaching Deans" came to the Rogue valley from Nampa, Ida., this fall and all four are teaching in valley schools. John Dean, (center right) teaches fifth and sixth grade at Sams Valley school; his wife, Myrna, is on the faculty of Jackson school as teacher of the second grades at Sams Valley school; his wife, Myrna, is on the coach at McLaughlin Junior High school and his wife, Janette, teaches fourth and fifth grades at West Side school. The John Deans have four other sons, Milton, at Oregon State college on a teaching fellowship; Jay, attending University of Oregon Dental college, and twins, Lowell and Calvin, sophomores in Medford High school. Their daughters are Mrs. Wayne Johnson, Laguna Beach, Calif., and Myrna Lea, sophomore at Northwest Nazarene college, Nampa.

Mrs. Richard J. House is the new secretary of Rogue Valley Knife and Fork club and last week was making preparations for the first fall meeting of the club. The House's younger son, Dennis, 5, will help his mother by stuffing envelopes when it is time to mail meeting notices. The Houses have two older children, a son with the Irish name of Creigh, who is 7, and a daughter, Susan, 12. When Knife and Fork club members receive their meeting notices they will announce a talk by Aly Wassil, Pakistanian who attended Harvard university and other schools in this country, and who has appeared on radio and television programs as well as lecturing. He speaks here Wednesday, October 16. The club schedule this year is for midweek rather than Monday meetings.
