

REASON TO SMILE—Leaving the Los Angeles courtroom in a happy frame of mind after the long drawn out trial of Confidential Magazine are Fred and Marjorie Meade and their attorney Arthur Crowley (right). After 13 days of deliberation, Judge Herbert V. Walker dismissed the six men and six women jury declaring a mistrial.

Drive to Replace Equipment Starts

A sales promotion, "Reddy's Round-Up," is being conducted locally to replace old electric equipment. Cooperating in the drive are local electrical appliance dealers, wiring contractors, plumbers and the California Oregon Power company. Copco customers are being offered trade-in bonuses beyond the regular dealer's allowance and a wire-on-time plan for adequate home wiring. "Reddy Kilowatt's Wire-On-Time Plan," allows the homeowner a chance to finance re-wiring or new wiring jobs without a down-payment, collateral or cosigners, the company said. Contracts may be available to Copco customers through all appliance dealers and electrical contractors in the Copco service area, it was explained.

Modoc Point Accident Fatal To Young Driver

Klamath Falls — Floyd L. Vincent, 20, of Chiloquin, was killed at 8:30 p.m. Friday when the pickup truck he was driving left Highway 97 one mile south of Modoc Point and overturned. Police said Vincent apparently lost control of his vehicle and was thrown out when it went over a bank and came to rest against a snow fence. Roy J. Kell, 43, a passenger in the Vincent vehicle, suffered head injuries and cuts. Vincent was the son of Mrs. Helen Vincent of Klamath Falls.

Vaccine Ineffective Health Official Says

Springfield, Mass. — City Health Commissioner Dr. John C. Ayres, Saturday took a long chilly look at the Asia Flu vaccine. "Why bother with it," he said. Ayres said the vaccine is not 100 per cent effective, can cause only a brief immunity — all that for a disease which is mild in the first place. Not only that, but one fifth of those given the vaccine will have a one-day bout with the influenza as a reaction, he said.

The Family Council

Editor's note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual report. The Family Council does not give advice; it merely reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Leon S.—All I've got is a bankbook.
Ethel S.—Is it stingy to try to stretch the dollar?

Leon S.—My wife and I met and married when we were both in the army. We were both far from home and lonesome and we enjoyed one another's company, so marriage seemed like the natural step.

That was two years ago and we sure have learned that marriage is a lot more complicated than you'd think. We fight about a lot of things because we have such different ideas, but mostly we fight about money.

Ethel is just about the stingiest person I ever met. She won't buy anything unless it's on sale. She refuses to buy on time. She says we've got to have a big bank balance before we start having a family.

All of my friends have cars, homes, kids and all I've got is a bankbook. Is this living?

Ethel S.—You'd think I was pocketing Leon's hard-earned money for my own personal use the way he talks. I am saving for our future, the future of our family. I work just as hard as he does and earn almost as much. Surely I have a right to have my say about how the money is spent.

I was shocked when I visited Leon's home after our marriage. His folks are up to their necks in debt. Everything is bought on time. They never get ahead. My parents taught me not to want things I can't pay for right out of my own pocket.

Leon calls me stingy, but it is stingy to want to stretch the dollar as far as possible? He ought to be grateful for a wife like me who knows how to make ends meet. He doesn't appreciate his luck.

The Council — One reason young persons are cautioned against hasty marriages is that they lack the wisdom and experience to quickly size up an individual and his values.

In the service, where everyone is away from family, friends and customary activities, this is particularly true. There is little opportunity for individual tastes and values to find expression.

Leon and Ethel were unwise to marry without having met each other's families. Family visits would have given them some clues about one another. It certainly would have opened discussion about some of the matters that now cause so much difficulty.

A marriage in which there is a conflict of values may be difficult, but it can be made successful and even richer in some ways than most, if the partners honestly desire it. Leon and Ethel have much to give one another if they open themselves to a new way of looking at things.

Leon is now convinced he is right—Ethel is stingy. Ethel is sure nothing can be more virtuous than "not to want things I can't pay for out of my own pocket."

Yet each point of view has its limitations. A life spent one step ahead of the bill collector surely lacks peace. On the other hand, a life devoted to "stretching the dollar" could result in nothing more fruitful than exactly that. Leon is justified in complaining that his bankbook is a poor substitute for the children he wants now—not when the bank balance gets big enough. Yes, Leon ought to be grateful for a wife "who knows how to make ends meet" and Ethel ought to be grateful for a husband who wants to live as fully as possible. They can make a wonderfully happy compromise out of the situation if they give it a good hard try.

Project Cancelled For Pendleton Area By Air Force Head

Washington — Secretary of the Air Force James H. Douglas announced Friday the project for construction of the Sage Direction Center at Pendleton, Ore., municipal airport has been cancelled, partially because of the "funds limitation under which the air force is endeavoring to operate."

The Air Force also said the cancellation was made because of the need for decreasing the overall capital investment in the Sage defense system.

Fire Protests — Sens. Wayne Morse (D-Ore.) and Richard L. Neuberger (D-Ore.) and Rep. Al Ullman fired protests with the Air Secretary. In a joint message, Morse and Ullman said late Friday they regarded the move as "false economy" and a "weakening" of the nation's defense.

Declares Discrimination — Neuberger declared that Oregon has been "severely discriminated against" in the securing of defense installations. He said that while California has 54 major military installations and Washington state 19, Oregon has only three.

The Morse-Ullman statement said the cancellation eliminated an 8.8 million dollar project which had a potential payroll of about 2.5 million dollars. It would have been manned by over 700 persons, they added.

Elk Creek Logger Writes Journal Story

Portland—Robert Kline, small logger and operator-owner of Kline Logging company, Medford, said that pre-planning fosters efficiency in an article published in the Sept. 20 issue of The Timberman, national forest industry trade journal.

Kline maps, plots, locates skidroads and landings before felling the article notes. He finds that knowledge of rough ground speeds operation for more efficient logging. Since there are few accurate maps in Kline's rugged operating area, Elk Creek, pre-planning starts with his own accurate mapping. Control is most essential for this mapping, he writes.

In addition to his pre-mapping and planning, Kline has several other operating principles of interest. He builds all his landings and skidroads ahead of the felling, moves his loader in between strings of trucks, picking up the tag ends later, has regular bi-weekly operating reports, and enforces safety precautions.
