

plastic jars and bottles for the things you'll need. They're lightweight and break-proof.

A small plastic cosmetic case about 4"x6"x6" should hold an assortment of five or six plastic containers with room left over for little things—mascara, eye shadow, eyebrow pencil, rouge, lipstick, bobby pins, hair net.

Your necessary extras will depend upon the climate of your vacation spot. For warmer climes, use a good protective sun lotion. For the snow country, you'll need similar protection against windburn and cold. For either climate, sun or snow glasses are essential.

Take along a washcloth in a waterproof plastic bag, or buy the little pellets which, when wet, open into disposable washcloths. If you're traveling by auto or going abroad, it's also wise to take soap.

Planning to do lots of sight-seeing on foot? Take along a good, comfortable foot powder or lotion.

Fresheners and astringents come in pads or plastic containers, as do anti-perspirants and deodorants.

There are countless purse-size items which take little space and enable you to continue your regular beauty routine wherever you are: pocket-size combs and brushes; portable toothbrushes which fold compactly—some even have room for dentrifice in the handle; miniature suede and clothes brushes; sewing kits; tiny manicure kits; and packets of cleansing tissue.

Have you tried the non-spillable stick colognes? And a purse flacon of your favorite perfume?

These miniatures and plastic containers are indispensable travel aids. With them, there's no longer any excuse for sacrificing good grooming while vacationing.
