

Thousands Cheer as Queen Arrives For Visit in Canada, United States

By GAY PAULEY
United Press Correspondent
Ottawa, — Britain's Queen Elizabeth flew across the Atlantic in 13 hours and 13 minutes today to an old-world-style royal welcome from her Canadian subjects launching an 11-day whirlwind visit to Ottawa and the United States.

The queen's plane, the "Seven Seas," left London at 3:09 a.m. and touched down here to the boom of a 21-gun cannon salute at 4:22 p.m. ed, three minutes ahead of schedule.

At 4:30 p.m. sharp, following her timetable with her usual rigidity, Elizabeth stepped from her gleaming silver and black British overseas airways corporation, U.S.-built DC-7C to the fanfare of trumpets and the strains of "God Save the Queen."

The cheers of the airport crowd were louder than the cannons. And the queen and her husband, Prince Philip, smiled in acknowledgement in the front ranks among the welcome 400 children, each waving a union jack.

Queen Wears Mink
The queen wore regal claret velvet and mink. She wore two pieces of jewelry—a diamond maple leaf brooch given to the Queen Mother Elizabeth by the Canadian government in 1939 for a brooch in the shane of the Quebec shield given the present queen on her visit to Canada in 1951.

She smiled happily, showing no sign of fatigue from her long day. She took the royal salute, inspected the 140-man guard of honor and within 15 minutes had trod the length of a ruby red carpet to a black limousine with a transparent plastic top for the ride to the residence of the governor general of Canada.

Saith Sisman, 33, Indian-born chief steward on the royal plane, said the queen and prince remained in their special compartment in the rear of the aircraft throughout the journey.

Good Travelers
She said the couple were "very good travellers" and rested during much of the flight, although they did not actually sleep. The prince was "delightfully amusing," she said, but the queen did not say very much.

The queen and prince rode in a compartment consisting of a sitting room, with a divan and dining table, and two dressing rooms. It was decorated with grey walls and carpet, peacock blue upholstery and red curtains.

The sky was clear. The weather was crisp. It was a perfect

Canadian autumn day for Elizabeth to begin her first visit to her Canadian subjects since she became their queen.

The route to government house passed some of the city's most spectacular autumn foliage. Large crowds slowed the way.

Elizabeth first came here as queen's progress much of the princess six years ago with her husband, Prince Philip. They toured Canada and the U.S. for several weeks, and he returned alone in 1954. This visit by the queen and prince will consist of only a four-day state visit to Ottawa before they go to the U.S.

To Visit New York
The visit to the U.S. will begin next Wednesday, when the royal party flies to Virginia to attend the 350th anniversary celebration of Jamestown. From there they will go to Washington, to be guests at the White House. Their tour will end with a one-day visit to New York. They will fly back to London October 21.

In New York the couple will stay in a hotel suite usually occupied by the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, it was disclosed today.

However, it is most unlikely that Elizabeth would see her uncle or his wife. The Windsors are in France for the rest of the year.

When they are in New York, the Windsors rent a suite in the Waldorf-Astoria Towers. When they're away, it's available to anyone else with the position and the money it requires.

Council Rules
During Elizabeth's absence, Britain will be technically ruled by a "council of state." It includes Princess Margaret, and Queen Mother Elizabeth who has been suggested as the possible successor to Vincent Massey as Governor General of Canada.

British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan, U.S. Ambassador John Hay Whitney, Canadian High Commissioner George A. Drew and other dignitaries from the three countries wished the royal couple "goodspeed" at a farewell party in Buckingham Palace Friday night.

The sherry party was organized at Elizabeth's special request because she felt there was no point in making the dignitaries get up at dawn to see her off. Ambassador Whitney left early. He had to catch a plane for Washington where he will join President Eisenhower and other U. S. officials welcoming Elizabeth next Thursday.

The queen found time between final checks of state papers to telephone Prince Charles, 8, at his boarding house school near London.

Charles has recovered from a mild attack of influenza. Elizabeth told the young prince she probably will bring back a present from America if he behaves himself. Charles also was told that in case he feels lonely for "Mama and Papa" his sister, Princess Anne, 7, will join him for Sunday morning church services.

Gettogether Club Plans Card Party

Officers of Reames chapter had as special invited guests of the evening, corresponding officers from each of the Southern Oregon chapters.

Mrs. Jack Creager was chairman of the committee in charge of refreshments and decorations. She was assisted by the Courtesy Ladies.

Refreshments were served in the dining room, which was decorated in the five Star Point colors. The room was centered with a huge star shaped table, above which hung a cluster of glistening colored stars. Sprays of green ivy and candles of blue, yellow, white, green and red were used for decorations. These same decorations were used on all tables around the room, and at each place was a gift of a hand made miniature cup in the assorted OES colors. Theme of the evening was "The Cup of Friendship."

Reames Social club will hold the monthly luncheon at 12 o'clock Wednesday, October 16 at Medford Masonic hall.

Following a business meeting, the afternoon will be spent at cards.

Mrs. Glen Hale is chairman of the luncheon committee.

Food Preservation Topic for Program Of Lake Creek Unit

Lake Creek—Lake Creek Extension unit members held the October meeting at the home of the unit chairman, Mrs. Carl Webb, Eagle Point. Guests were Mrs. Grace Haskins, mother of the hostess, and Mrs. Darwin Durr, a cousin of Mrs. James Edge.

The project lesson was "Food Preservation" and was given by Mrs. Ernest Burrell and Mrs. John Davidson. Many phases in the freezing of foods were shown and also, the correct method of the wrapping of foods were discussed. An unusual ingredient for the crust of a baked Alaska pie, was crushed pretzels. Unit information is direct from Oregon State college.

Members are requested to take Christmas gift making ideas to the November meeting. Also, any suggestions for lessons for next year to the program planning chairman, Mrs. Davidson.
