

Maloney Jury Hears Recording Over Objections

Portland — A tape recording, subject of much debate during the gambling - conspiracy trial of racetrack figure Thomas E. Maloney, finally was played to the jury over defense objections Wednesday.

Raymond F. Clark, who testified earlier he made the tape, identified the voices on it as those of Maloney, Joseph P. McLaughlin, and ex-District Attorney William Langley.

Poker in Conversation

The tape recording carried a conversation, among other things, about poker, punchboards, politics and "China Joints" as well as profanity.

The jury listened to the recording with earphones while holding transcripts of it in their hands.

Howard Lonergan, defense attorney, renewed his objections to the tape but did not elaborate much in front of the jury since he had gone over the points previously in the judge's chambers.

The tape playing was only a part of Wednesday's highlights.

Lt. Bard Purcell, brother of ex-Police Chief Jim Purcell, testified that Maloney wanted the police bureau to ease up on vice prosecutors, saying it was bad for business in general.

Denies Frame Request

Clark, under cross-examination, denied that he asked Clifford O. Bennett, former operator of the 8212 club, to help frame Mayor Terry Schruk. He said he did go to Great Falls, Mont., in the summer of 1956 and asked Bennett to come back to Portland "but I didn't ask him to help frame anyone."

Another witness, Howard Riddell, a sound engineer and technician, said he examined the tape recording and found no alteration of the audible and intelligible portions of the tape.

In the Day's News

By FRANK JENKINS

The state of Oregon has been doing a lot of talking recently about the importance of increased industrial development.

That prompts this question: Just how important is increased industrial development to the economy of a state or a region?

FOR an answer to that question, let's turn to some U.S. department of commerce figures that are quoted by the Klamath County chamber of commerce in its current bulletin entitled Klamath Keynotes. The commerce department estimates that each new industry employing 200 persons will support the following increases in the total economy of the community in which it is located:

- $75,000 in added retail sales.
- $2,500,000 in new taxable wealth.
- $1,500,000 in new life insurance sales.
- 1400 new population.
- $1,000,000 in new bank deposits.

It should be understood, of course, that these estimates include not only the new employees themselves and their families but the added service industry people—that is to say, those who shine each other's shoes and wash each other's shirts, etc.—who will be attracted to the area by the new industrial development.

IN THE light of these figures, I think it must be agreed by EVERYONE that new industrial development is worth going after.

And— I'd say— It's high time for the state of Oregon to GET BUSY.

Labor Secretary Urges Probe of Companies

Pendleton — James T. Marr, executive secretary of the Oregon State Labor council, said here Wednesday night that the McClellan committee investigating labor should also investigate some of the companies with which labor has been involved.

Marr was here for presentation of an AFL-CIO official charter to the Pendleton Central Labor council.

French Communists Order Demonstrations

Paris — The French Communist party ordered its five million followers to hold nationwide strikes and demonstrations Thursday against "the dirty little war" in Algeria. Widespread violence was feared.

Communist unions joined with non-Communist unions Wednesday in turning the nation's industrial life into chaos in a 12-hour strike of gas and electrical workers. The Reds believed the 18-day-old government crisis would paralyze police attempts to crush the demonstrations.

The Communists also hoped widespread disorders would block the efforts of tough, anti-Communist conservative leader Antoine Pinay to win National Assembly approval Friday as the 24th post-war premier. His chances appeared shaky.

Inspectors Question Paisley Suspect

Lakeview — Postal inspectors Wednesday questioned Jesse Hibdon, 30, Merced, Calif., suspect in the holdup of the Paisley postoffice and the slaying of John Troy Lawson last Thursday.

Hibdon was captured Tuesday by Harold Broderick, fire chief at the coastal town of Hammond who was deer hunting in the Lapine area between Paisley and Bend.

Hibdon was brought to the Lake county jail here where his partner in the holdup, Donald Ferguson, 32, Bakersfield, Calif., was taken after his capture north of Paisley shortly after the getaway car was found abandoned.

Lake County Sheriff Thomas Elliott said Hibdon admitted taking part in the holdup but denied that he shot Lawson.

OLDEST BAKER DIES

Wilkes Barre, Pa. — William H. Alden, 94, who at his retirement in June was believed to be the oldest baker in the country, died Wednesday. Alden was a baker for 78 years.
