

Phil Moyer Favored in Saturday Night Scrap

Phil Moyer and Roy Ray, two young middleweights, are awaiting the bell which will send them into action in the eight-round main event at Hedrick junior high school gym tomorrow night. They headline an all-professional boxing card, featuring 26 rounds of mitt tossing, starting at 8:30 p.m. Doors will open at 7:30.

Moyer, who is a member of the Sid Flaherty stable and hails from Portland, has been installed as the favorite by local fight fans because of his excellent showings here while fighting on Paj club cards as an amateur. However, word from San Francisco, Ray's home town, says that he is a good left-hooker who employs an aggressive style and turns on the steam when he gets stung. Ray has had about four times as many professional fights as Moyer and has been in with much faster company, including Garth Panter, Willie Vaughn and Joey Giambra.

Semi-Windup Promises Action
The semi-windup, which promises to rival the main event for action, pits LeRoy Flomond, Portland, against Bob Milne, Seattle, in six rounds. This is a rematch of their Oct. 8 fight in Portland in which both boys were on the floor before Flomond won a close decision.

Carleton Lincoln, also popular here as an amateur, will go against Hugh Williams, Portland, in a four round match.

Kenny Dixon, Klamath Falls, who was to have boxed Jack Raxter of Portland, sent word this morning that he has been ordered to bed because of the flu. An opponent is being sought to fight Raxter.
