The Medical Roundup

by Walter Alvarez

Emeritus Consultant in Medicine,
Mayo Clinic
Emeritus Professor of Medicine,
Mayo Foundation

DIAPHRAGMATIC HERNIA

Many people write in great distress because some x-ray man has just found that they have a tiny rupture in the diaphragm or mid-riff, which allows a little bit of their stomach to go up into their chest. This happens only when they lie down, or strain, or when they have eaten a big meal, or when they have gotten fat in their mid-region.

These people want to know if they have to be operated on immediately, and my answer is that I doubt it. I haven't had one of these persons operated on for 15 years or more; most of them get by beautifully if they will only have patience, and will not eat too much and get too fat. I've seen many of them who were considerably distressed by their hernia who got well after taking 20 or 30 or 40 pounds off their abdomen.

It is most important to try to find out whether the patient's symptoms are due to the hernia or to something else. Often they are due to nerves. I never pay much attention to diaphragmatic or hiatal hernia, unless the patient says her trouble is pain which comes after a big meal when she reaches down to put on her shoes or to pull on stockings. Then she is most likely to push a bit of her stomach up through the hole in the diaphragm. In practically all of the cases I see, the symptoms are obviously not those that could be reduced by the hernia. In that case, it would be unwise to operate to close the little hole. The patient would be no better afterward.

Bursitis of the Shoulder

Many persons ask, "What is bursitis of the shoulder?" A bursa is a little sac full of an oily substance. The one near the shoulder is under the muscle that caps the shoulder. I suspect that when it gets inflamed or sore, this is part of a tendency to arthritis. Sometimes aspirin and physiotherapy help. When the pain is severe and will not respond to physiotherapy I always try x-ray treatment, because this gives quick relief in two out of three cases.

People ask if it is all right to use the arm. Most certainly, yes. If, for weeks, one does not use the arm, it can get stiff, and then adhesions in the joint may have to be broken up. If I had a tendency to get a stiff shoulder, every day I would reach up on the wall in my room as far as I could go. As Dr. Hensch has said, the people who are too afraid of pain get a stiff joint, while the people with more stoicism, who will keep moving the joint, will get well.

Dr. Alvarez hopes his readers will understand that it would be impossible for him to answer requests for information or to attempt to diagnose by mail.
