Four-Inch Snowfall Snarls Idaho Panhandle Traffic; Washington Towns Receive Blanket

Other Eastern Washington Towns Receive Blanket

Gusty Winds, Rain Common in Oregon

By UNITED PRESS

Winter made a pre-season bow in Washington and northern Idaho while Oregon got heavy precipitation and forecasts of more to come today.

An arctic air mass moved in to the north of Oregon, leaving snowfalls in eastern Washington and northern Idaho and sending temperatures plunged to the low 20s.

Snow Snarls Traffic

Traffic was snarled over a wide area as four inches of snow fell in Spokane to break an October snowfall record set in 1933. Lesser amounts were reported at Colville, Ephrata, Moses Lake, Ellensburg and other eastern Washington cities. Washington's mountain passes got a heavy fall, stalling traffic.

Streets and highways were dangerously slick and the State Patrol warned motorists to stay home if possible.

Schools were closed in the Spokane valley. In northern Idaho schools closed near Bonners Ferry, Sandpoint, Rathdrum and Post Falls. Snowfalls in the Idaho panhandle ranged from three to 12 inches.

The forecast called for moderating temperatures in that region with highs reaching the 40s Thursday.

Rain in Oregon

In Oregon gusty winds and rainfall were common as a Pacific storm moved in. Gusts up to 50 miles per hour were forecast for the Columbia Gorge today and up to 40 miles per hour off the coast.

The weather bureau said precipitation would be heavier than normal for the season for the next five days.

Mayor Snider Named Director of League

Portland — Mayor John Snider of Medford was elected to the board of directors of the League of Oregon Cities at the final sessions of the group's annual convention here this morning.

The number of board members was increased from five to seven this year, and it was to one of the new positions that Mayor Snider was elected. Three members of the board now come from southern Oregon — Mayor Snider, Mayor Lawrence Slater of Klamath Falls, and W. W. Baldere, city attorney at Grants Pass.

Syria Gives Saud Three Days To End Crisis With Turkey

United Nations, N.Y. — Syria, which has rejected all mediation efforts in its dispute with Turkey, today reluctantly agreed to give King Saud of Saudi Arabia three days to settle it.

The Syrians did not say they accepted Saud's mediation offer, which already has been agreed to by Turkey. But they voted for adjournment of the United Nations General Assembly debate on the Middle East "war crisis" until Friday.

The adjournment proposal came at the end of one of the most menacing attacks on the United States Russia has delivered in the UN since the height of the cold war.

Charges U.S. Instigation In it, Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko charged that Turkey, at American instigation, was ready to attack Syria with 1,300 warplanes, 1,400 tanks, 3,500 artillery pieces and other equipment totalling about $2 billion worth supplied by the United States and not yet paid for.

U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, appealing for the assembly to adjourn proceedings to give King Saud time to mediate, accused Gromyko of "playing a game."

Despite "soothing statements," Gromyko said, the United States was attempting to have Turkey start a major war and drag in the entire North Atlantic Treaty organization.

"Merely for the record," said Lodge, "I will say that the heart of the North Atlantic Treaty is the statement that an attack on one is an attack on all. In other words, we stay where we are attacked."

"Remember that the North Atlantic Treaty was only evolved after the Soviet Union had gobbled up Lithuania, Latvia, Estonia, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Bulgaria, Romania and Albania. I am not sure that I mentioned them all."

Paraguayan Ambassador Pacifico Montero De Vargas finally proposed an indefinite adjournment in the "hope that mediation will be successful."

Syrian Ambassador Farid Zeineddine, expelled from Washington earlier this year, tacked on an amendment that the adjournment be not longer than three days—in effect, Friday afternoon.

The Syrian amendment was approved, 33-32 with 15 abstentions.

Juvenile Office To Move To Detention Home Next Tuesday The Jackson county juvenile office will be moved into the new juvenile detention home on the fairgrounds starting Tuesday morning, Mrs. Kay Crowell, juvenile officer, informed the county court this morning.

Depending on the arrival of special institutional furniture, the home will not be ready for occupancy until some time in December, she said. Prior to the opening an open house will be held for three days for the public and officials from Oregon, Washington and California.

A special ceremony is also planned for the opening, but details are yet to be worked out, she said.

Evidence Indicates Visitors at Campus At Southern Oregon

Ashtland — Proof was not positive but plenty of evidence was on hand this morning for Southern Oregon college students to assume that their campus had been visited during the night by representatives of Oregon College of Education.

The letters "OCE" were cut into the turf in the center of Fuller field where football teams of the two schools vie on Saturday afternoon. An effigy was hung on the north goal post bearing the names of "Maurer," "Romine," and "Akins." Ron and Larry Maurer and Chuck Romine are players and Al Akins is coach of Southern Oregon gridders.

"OCE 57 Champs" was painted on the press box and "OCE Champs" on the gymnasium door. A yellow streak was painted down the dressing room door.

No one was caught in the act of cutting the turf or doing the painting and, if the culprits were from the Monmouth school, they apparently had departed from Ashtland by the time the vandalism was discovered.

The Saturday game is a crucial one in the Oregon Collegiate conference.

United States To Reappraise Aid To Yugoslavia

Final Decision Yet To Be Made

Washington — The United States announced today that it is "reappraising" its military and economic aid programs for Yugoslavia.

But State Department spokesman Lincoln White said that so far as he knows no final decision has yet been made. He said previously planned shipments of jet aircraft, spare military parts and surplus agricultural commodities are proceeding to the Tito government.

White said the reappraisal is taking place because of "recent developments." He did not spell these out but presumably referred principally to Yugoslavia's recognition of the Communist puppet government of East Germany.

Move Approved

West Germany has broken off diplomatic relations with Yugoslavia as a result of the Yugoslav action. The United States has expressed general approval of West Germany's move.

U.S. authorities feared the action by Yugoslavia might set off a chain reaction in which other governments would recognize East Germany and thereby perpetuate the division of Germany.

White said that although the United States is taking a new look at its aid programs for Yugoslavia, as far as he knows scheduled talks with the Yugoslavians on possible new shipments of U.S. surplus farm commodities will proceed. He did not know when those talks would begin.

To Discuss Aspects

White was asked to comment on the Yugoslav aid program as a result of a London report that the State Department already has decided to suspend all economic and most military aid to Yugoslavia.

He said, "In the light of recent developments we are reappraising our program with Yugoslavia. We expect to discuss the various aspects of this matter with the Yugoslavians but when this will take place I do not know at the moment."

Americans Stay Home As Saigon Celebrates

Saigon — Americans, alerted by sabotage bombings of three U.S. buildings, stayed off streets this morning while thousands of Vietnamese massed in the City Hall to celebrate the first anniversary of the Hungarian revolution.

Saigon's 2,000 Americans—all but about 200 of them employed by the United States government—received strict instructions limiting their movement.

United States officials told Americans to stay home except for going to and from work.

The orders followed the bombings Tuesday of two American Army billets and of the United States Information Service (USIS) library in which 13 American military personnel were injured.

The Vietnamese government believes the bombings were engineered to embarrass the South Vietnam government.

Sputnik, Syria Will Be Topics For Discussion

Proposals Planned To Strengthen Position

Washington — British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan and President Eisenhower flew here today for summit talks on Russia's twin challenges — Sputnik and Syria.

Eisenhower returned from a New York speaking engagement with plans to lead a "chin up" campaign to bolster America's confidence in its economic, scientific and military strength.

Macmillan landed 30 minutes later, on a direct flight from London. It was reported that he carried concrete proposals for Anglo-American partnership in space missile development, stronger inter-Allied scientific cooperation through NATO, and a common front against Russia's Middle East propaganda offensive.

Met at Airport

The two leaders will meet in three days of informal talks beginning this afternoon.

Secretary of State John Foster Dulles and Adm. Lewis Strauss, chairman of the Atomic Energy commission, met the British Prime Minister at the airport.

Both Eisenhower and Macmillan gave advance signs of offering concrete proposals to strengthen the West's position.

Macmillan is expected to present new proposals for Anglo-American scientific cooperation, centering on nuclear weapons development. Eisenhower has indicated he will seek better scientific teamwork between the two nations.

Both American and British officials hoped to capitalize on the goodwill created by Queen Elizabeth's visit to this country to hammer out important new Anglo-American accords on major world issues.

British Foreign Minister Selwyn Lloyd, who has been here several days, and Dulles were scheduled to attend the opening meeting and an informal dinner to follow.

Macmillan's visit was arranged soon after Russia's earth satellite was launched Oct. 4. It was announced while Britain's Queen Elizabeth II was visiting North America.

While the "big two" talks were expected to place considerable emphasis on speeding Western military and scientific advances in the light of the Soviet achievement, the occasion will give the two leaders and their advisers a chance to canvass the explosive Middle East situation.

Opposes Summit Talks

Diplomats were cool to a report from London that Macmillan will urge a new top level meeting with the Russians. The Eisenhower administration opposes three-power "summit" talks at a time when the Reds are likely to be tougher negotiators than before their satellite success.

It seems likely President Eisenhower is ready to assure Macmillan the administration will seek amendments in the 1946 Atomic Energy act when Congress convenes in January. Such amendments would clear the way for closer nuclear cooperation with Britain and other Free Nations.

Southern Pacific Court Case Upheld

Salem — The State Supreme Court today upheld a Douglas County Circuit Court decision for Southern Pacific company, despite a jury verdict of $5,000 for Harry C. Marks.

Marks was executor of the will of John E. Marks, who was killed when his truck stalled on railroad tracks and was hit by a train.

In an opinion by Justice George Rossman, the court held that the train had given repeated blasts with its whistle, but that Marks had failed to get out of his truck until it was too late.

The court said that Engineer Clarence W. Wilson did all he could to avoid hitting Marks.
