Hollywood—Errol Flynn, currently portraying John Barrymore in a new movie, says he doesn't know whether to be happy or outraged when people tell him, "You're perfect for the part."

The flamboyant actor agrees he and the famed profile had a great deal in common. "We both had boats," Flynn laughed, "and we both made a

Lives Not Similar

"But I can't agree that Jack Barrymore's life and my own are similar in any other respects. He was unlucky in his emotional life and destroyed himself. I had a little better luck."

"I found Pat Wymore, a woman I loved, and who loved me. So my story has a happy ending. Pat never tries to reform me."

Flynn, sitting in his dressing room at Warner Brothers, toyed with the putty on the end of his nose—a gimmick that adds one-eighth of an inch to his own schnozz. It helps create a likeness of the famed Barrymore profile.

Just a Boy Scout

"I knew Jack well," the actor went on. "But I was just a boy scout compared to the olympians he used to call his buddies. You might say I was on the fringes of the gang—and sometimes I almost needed a pass to get into their parties."

"Once, though, Jack stopped by my house for an evening of drinking and stayed three weeks. His favorite name for me was 'Navarre.' I never understood why."

Flynn stars with Dorothy Malone in "Too Much, Too Soon," the controversial autobiography by Barrymore's daughter, Diana. "I'm trying to portray Barrymore without imitating him," said Flynn. "It's not easy. He burlesqued himself so much in his later years people could never tell when he was clowning."

"The book and the script are an accurate portrait of Jack as I knew him. Our movie shows his troubles with women and creditors."

"He had a wonderfully intellectual mind. He never ceased to amaze me with his knowledge about all kinds of subjects."

"I'm trying to play this role the way I think Jack would like it played. When people say I'm a natural for the part all I can say is, 'Thanks a lot.'"

"But I think they're wrong. I'm the shy, retiring type myself," he laughed.

Flight Engineers As Pilots Proposed

Washington—The Airline Pilots Association (ALPA) proposed today that airline flight engineers be required to be trained pilots so they can take the controls in event of "cockpit heart attacks."

In a statement issued here, ALPA President C. N. Sayen said that by requiring the third crew members on airliners to be qualified pilots and public would be adequately protected in the event one of the two regular pilots became incapacitated.

Russia Declared Diverting Attention

Los Angeles—Threats of war in the Middle East were stirred up by Russia to divert attention from the anniversary of the Hungarian Revolution in the opinion of Sen. William F. Knowland (R-Calif.).

The husky-voiced legislator told a Greater Press Club audience Wednesday night that he hoped the Soviet Union will not make a mistaken judgment in the Middle East.

"We could and would not per-

CHARGE DISMISSED

New York—A charge of simple assault against Stock Club owner Sherman Billingsley was dismissed Wednesday when the complainant failed to appear. Last June 11 a house painter accused Billingsley of threatening to shoot him and several other painters who were having their lunch on Billingsley's porch. When the painter, Murray Beskin, failed to appear in General Sessions Court, Judge Bernard A. Kozickie dismissed the charge.
