Methodists Plan Annual Bazaar On November 5

First Methodist church will have this year's International Bazaar Tuesday, November 5, from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. in Wesley hall, with Mrs. L. G. Rankin, president of the Woman's Society of Christian Service, in charge. The event will be a benefit for the church building fund. The church hall will be transformed into an international village for the day. Fourteen booths will be decorated to represent as many different countries and many of the salesladies will be costumed. The booths will feature traditional gifts as well as many new items this year. Mrs. Rankin has announced. Home-made mince meat is being prepared and other items include needlework, decorated candles, baked foods, children's clothes, Christmas card holders. The Holland booth will feature plants.

The Methodist Youth fellowship will decorate a booth to picture Italy and members will sell peanut brittle. Susannah Wesley unit of Wesleyan Service guild is making many varieties of home-made candy which will be sold from a pagoda by Japanese girls.

One room will be devoted entirely to the children — repeating a successful feature of last year's sale — with items priced so that children can buy gifts from their allowances. A free nursery will be provided throughout the day to care for the very small children while the parents shop.

Americans Show More Interest In New York Stock Exchange

By VIVIAN SANDE United Press Correspondent New York — Americans — including women — are getting more help to the world of finance.

So say the GGG's of New York, eight girls who guide visitors through a financial landmark that has become the third largest tourist attraction in New York City.

Any one of these girls might tell you about the Texan who some time ago entered the building and asked, "but where's the cattle?"

The "three G's" are the gallery girl guides of the New York Stock Exchange. Million Dollar Gallery.

They now operate in a million-dollar visitor's gallery and exhibition hall which last March was opened by the New York Stock Exchange building to accommodate the ever-growing numbers of visitors.

Each year the guides take nearly 400,000 visitors, about half of them women, through the visitors galleries of the 165-year-old exchange. Over the gallery railing they point out the busy trading floor below, about the size of a football field but far more crowded.

The exchange now has 1,366 dues-paying members. Since 1950 the prices paid for the memberships called seats, although everyone on the floor stands, have ranged from $38,000 to $113,000. Members are entitled to execute "buy" or "sell" orders in the exchange's 1,200 listed stocks. More than half — 51.6 per cent — of the 8,630,000 stock owners in the United States are women.

Know More Now The girls say it is obvious more visitors know about stocks and the Stock Exchange than they did five years ago, because they never ask anymore: "Where are the seats?" They know there aren't any.

A recent survey shows the most frequently asked question today is "Can I go to the floor and place an order?" The answer: "No."

Other frequent questions: What's the price of a seat on the exchange now? Answer: Around $72,000.

Why aren't there any women on the floor? Answer: No woman ever has applied for membership.

How did you get your job? Answer: "Applied for it." Actually the gallery girl guides also have to apply themselves to their jobs. Catherine Wittmore, a former airplane mechanic and flier, says they're chosen for personality, appearance and ability to learn.

Dancers, Models, Artists She said most of the 35 girls ages range from 20 to 35 who have been GGG's since the service started, including former ballet dancers, models, an artist and a comparison shopper, knew little of finance when they began. They bone up on the business in an intensive 16-week training course at the Institute of Finance. It's a part-time job to give the 15-minute talk on the Stock Exchange, then answer questions, and it's a tribute to them that they rarely are stumped, even by experts.

Visitors rarely ask their guides for tips on stocks. When they do, they are told, "we never forecast the future of the market."

Of course the gallery girl guides get their share of odd questions. The favorite anecdote of the week:

A little old lady excitedly pointed to the figures 3:12 on the wall above the stock quotation board and said breathlessly, "Oh, tell me quickly what that stock is. I want to buy some as soon as I can. I've been watching it, and it's gone up two points in two minutes."

What she saw was a dial-less electric clock.
