To obtain one pound of insulin powder, pharmaceutical companies must process 10,000 pounds of animal glands, the Health News Institute reports. Yet efficiency in the production research has reduced the price to a point where the average diabetic can fill his insulin needs for 15 cents a day.

Precise Standard Time of sunrise, sunset, moonrise, moonset or any other moving event, can be given only for a single point. In compiling a calendar for any given region, the usual method is to select a given point to serve as an "average."

It is estimated by authoritative sources that there are only between 300 and 400 professional astronomers in the United States.

The Medical Roundup

by Walter Alvarez

Emeritus Consultant in Medicine, Mayo Clinic
Emeritus Professor of Medicine, Mayo Foundation

Modern Cult of Sun Bathing
Today, there are hundreds of thousands of people who don't feel right unless their skin is burnt brown as a berry. A few write to ask if this sort of thing is good for them. Skin specialists tell me that they don't like the idea at all, because they know that excessive exposure to the sun's rays predisposes a person to cancer of the skin. It is well-known that ranchers and farmers and others who live out in the open in the southern states tend to get cancer of the skin on their face and neck and the back of their hands. This tendency is much less marked among farmers in New England, where the sun's rays are not so strong.

So far as I know, there is no good evidence to indicate that sun-bathing will improve a person's general health. His vacation in the Southland may make him feel much better, but I suspect the improvement was due to the rest he got, and not to the tanning of his skin.

Raynaud's Disease
Raynaud's disease is a curious condition in which the arteries in one or more fingers will cramp down so tightly that the finger turns white and hurts. In the worst cases there may even come ulcerations around the nails due to lack of sufficient blood. The trouble is due to a nervous storm that comes down the nerves that supply the blood vessels. I've known women who got the disease for the first time right after a loved husband died, and I've known other women who got an attack of white fingers when they lost their temper or became excited or upset.

Naturally, most people with Raynaud's disease have most of their trouble during the winter months when cold reinforces the tendency to cramping in the arteries of the fingers. Then, the essential thing is to wear the heaviest wool-lined gloves obtainable.

I don't know of any good medical treatment yet available that will protect the person from getting the white fingers. If I had a tendency to get them, I know I would try to live with as even a temper as possible.

Dr. Alvarez hopes his readers will understand that it would be impossible for him to answer requests for information or to attempt to diagnose by mail. (Released by The Register and Tribune Syndicate, 1957)
